Jenkins of Home Office and Healey of Exchequer Are Keeping Their Posts

By BERNARD WEINRAUB
Special to The New York Times

LONDON, April 8— Prime Minister James Callaghan announced his Cabinet tonight, naming Anthony Crosland Foreign Secretary.

Mr. Crosland, a gruff 57-year-old Labor Party intellectual who is now Secretary of State for the Environment, was a surprise choice in a list that overhauls the bulk of Harold Wilson's Cabinet.

Mr. Callaghan, his Foreign Secretary, who announced his resignation last month as Prime Minister, was replaced Tuesday by Mr. Callaghan, his Foreign Secretary.

Straddling Party Division
Although the new Cabinet has some surprises, the list was clearly designed to straddle the ideological divisions within the Labor Party.

Only a week before that, the British newspaper had been hinting that Mr. Teng might be ousted.

Three days later, the pro-

It was believed that moving Mr. Jenkins, who is heavily committed to European integration, to the Foreign Office would have brought discord between forces for and against the Common Market.

Another official who retained his job was 51-year-old Anthony Wedgwood Benn, an influential left-winger who is the Secretary of State for Energy.

Cabinet changes included a promotion for Shirley Williams, a highly popular moderate who, at 44, is the most prominent woman in the Labor Party.

Margaret Thatcher retains her control of the Conservatives.

Leftists in Lebanon May Agree to Extend Cease-Fire

Leftist leaders implied today they would favor an extension of the shaky armed truce if Parliament met as scheduled on Saturday to begin the process of ousting President Suleiman Franjeh from office. But the radio supporting Mr. Franjeh has been adopting a truculent line in the last few days, and there have been reports that the 63-year-old Gorse, who arrived in Beirut, Christian political chief has this evening as complementary to the efforts of French and American mediators to consider "internationalizing" the civil war by taking the issue to the United States. Well-placed diplomatic informants say that one purpose of the American and French mediation missions is to persuade Lebanon's Christian election of a successor to Mr. Franjeh to accept the American mediator, Dean Brown, and his French counterpart, Georges Fraga, who arrived in Beirut this evening, are widely seen as complementary to the efforts of Syria to achieve a resolution of the Franjeh issue.

Abducted Basque Industrialist Found Dead in Northern Spain

MADRID, April 8—The body of a 58-year-old Basque industrialist kidnapped by the Basque nationalist group E.T.A. three weeks ago was found this morning on a highway near the town of Elgoibar. The body, also known that since they want all the consequences. The state but efficiently and implacably. Mr. Fraga, in appealing to the common sense of the "Basque people," also pledged that terrorism would not slow down the process of democratic reform, "which the Government has the firm will to carry on." He asked for cooperation from the population "to finish with the terror of E.T.A."

arms from the United States but "if it was not possible, O.K., that's fine, we'll get what we want from other countries." The United States decision to sell the planes to Egypt represented the first step in ending a 20-year embargo on weapons to the country and followed Mr. Sadat's decision last month to abrogate Cairo's Treaty of Friendship and Cooperation with the Soviet Union. The sale stirred a controversy in the United States among members of Congress and the Jewish community. The Ford Administration suggested that nothing beyond the aircraft was under consideration now. Mr. Sadat, who concluded a four-day visit to Italy with a visit to Pope Paul VI, said that Egypt regarded itself as independent of all "superpowers." And he took the opportunity to denounce the Soviet Union once again for not replacing Egyptian arms lost in the 1973 war with Israel. Still, he said, he has managed to bring Egypt back to "full power" following the war and said if the reports were true that Israel now had atomic weapons "we shall not be scared at all."

Syria in the fifth century; in the seventh century, Islam drove them out of central Syria and into the mountains of northern Lebanon, where to this day they are the strongest. Scholars say that the community lapsed into heretical beliefs between the seventh and the 12th centuries, but the invasion of the Crusaders coincided with what one churchman called "a wonderful change of heart." In 1180 the Maronites entered into communion with Rome, though they preserved their ancient liturgy. Since then, the well-organized community has often looked to Rome and Europe for inspiration and support, which has given many Maronites a feeling of being more "Western" than Arab. The Maronites also are deeply aware of the terrible massacres of 1960, when the Maronite peasantry and priesthood clashed with the feudal Druses in the Chuf Mountains—today the political turf of Mr. Jumblat. Fifteen thousand Maronites died and 100,000 were left homeless.

banon, even though many prominent Palestinian and leftist leaders are Christian, and Christians fight in company with Moslems in some leftist groups. "This is not an anti-Maronite war," declared Lieut. Ahmed al-Khatib, leader of the Lebanese Arab Army, a Moslem deserter since Monday when E.T.A. forces "were fighting against bigoted Maronites, bigoted Sunnis, bigoted Shiites and bigoted Druses. This is an antibigot war. This is a war for secularization." The words were spoken with evident sincerity, but it remains a fact that men die daily, on both sides of the lines, on the basis of the religion listed on their Government-issued identification cards.

State in the Foreign office, and deputy to Mr. Callaghan.

Mrs. Castle's departure leaves unfinished her most controversial battle, the diminution of private health care and its separation from the Government-supported health service.

The biggest surprise, however, was Mr. Crosland's appointment. A moderate with a sharp grasp of socialist theory, he has often been bracketed with Mr. Jenkins, though Mr. Crosland's attitude on the Common Market seemed less decisive than that of the Home Secretary.

Mr. Crosland served under Harold Wilson as Minister of State for Economic Affairs, Secretary of State for Education, President of the Board of Trade and Secretary of State for Local Government and Regional Planning.

There were reports that Mr. Callaghan views Mr. Shore as a potential Labor Party leader and Prime Minister, and the environment post, covering several ministries, is seen as a promotion from the rather small Department of Trade.

All members of the Cabinet have salaries of £13,000 each, or £26,000. Cabinet ministers who are in the House of Commons also receive a Parliament allowance of £3,000 each. Mr. Callaghan's salary as Prime Minister is £20,000.

Among the resignations—Cabinet officials who were not reappointed to Government posts—were Barbara Castle, the left-wing 63-year-old Social Services Secretary, who presided over the most troubled period in the National Health Service. She was replaced by David Ennals, the Minister of

Dublin Frees I.R.A. Chief Rise in Violence Expects

DUBLIN, April 9, (Reuters)—David O'Connell, regarded as one of the most active leaders in the Irish Guerrilla movement, was released today after nine months in jail, arousing concern about imminent new bloodshed.

Authorities in British-administered Northern Ireland, facing a renewed spate of bombings, believed that Mr. O'Connell's release could signal intensified violence of both sides of the Irish Sea.

About the time Mr. O'Connell was being let out of Portlaoise Prison, two more bombs went off across the border in Northern Ireland.

One was in the center of Craigavon, County Armagh. It went off at a building site and injured seven people. The other bomb in Londonderry injured four British Army members, one a woman, who were firing people at a checkpoint.

Mr. O'Connell reportedly was the leader of the Provisional Irish Republican Army before his arrest last year. He is viewed as a dedicated advocate of intensified violence.

Official apprehensions were heightened by a telephone warning from a Protestant extremist group called the Ulster Freedom Fighters.

The callers threatened all-out war against the I.R.A., which for nearly seven years has been battling to force a British withdrawal from Northern Ireland, and threatened the assassination of Merlyn Rees, the British Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

"We have to take threats seriously," military source said, no doubt that all the have the power trouble."

Mr. O'Connell was for membership in the Dublin Government, though in principle uniting the two parliaments, is opposed to violence.

Switzerland Expels Spinola On Political-Activity Charge

Special to The New York Times

GENEVA, April 8—The Swiss Government today ordered the expulsion of Gen. Antonio de Spínola, the former Portuguese President, on the ground that he had violated his pledge not to engage in political activity while on Swiss soil.

The Government said that an investigation had established that General Spínola had been active while in Switzerland on behalf of the Democratic Movement for the Liberation of Portugal.

The general's secretary, Luis Oliveira Dias, was also ordered to leave the country.

General Spínola arrived here on Feb. 7 from Brazil, where he had gone into exile after resigning the Portuguese presidency under leftist pressure in September, 1974. The 66-year-old general had assumed the presidency earlier that year.

The Swiss Government said yesterday that it was giving the report published in the West German Stern that General Spínola had visited West Germany, to be projected for a projected port in Portugal.

Today's announcement no mention of the said that in Geneva 22 General Spínola aides a "special undertaking" financial and support" for the D Movement for the Liberation of Portugal.

Justice Minister Ku told reporters, how General Spínola had that while on a visit to West Germany to publication of a book, been approached by German group that funds for his motion

STRESSES DOMESTIC ISSUES

man Leader Turns from Foreign Role to Election Campaign

AIG R. WHITNEY April 8—Chancellor Schmidt, who is facing Oct. 9, seems to be inward to domestic problems and away from European leadership.

Parliament he said, Germany, "We are old power. We do not have ambition to underpin world poli-

It is in his speech, "European Community is in good shape," he plans to use his Commoners as a domestic focus.

With Be Stressed point out, he said, Germany's mark is not currency in Europe. 5 percent inflation is the continent's lowest. Danger of Communist power is insignificant, in a word.

Europe is in a terrible state but that West is doing well in spite of it.

Schmidt admitted as speech in Parliament: "It is clear economic development partly to the ordination of economic within the European Community. I do not intend to go to a remote degree, despite the fact of this Government's predecessors." Chancellor Schmidt believes it a waste of an economically strong Germany to urge economic policies on an inflation rate more than 20 percent, with its heavy balance of pay-

EX-STEWARDESS WINS PAY CLAIM

But Common Market Court
Limits Future Cases

Special to The New York Times
BRUSSELS, April 8—The European Court of Justice, an arm of the Common Market based in Luxembourg, ordered Sabena Airlines today to give an ex-stewardess back pay on the basis of the Market's long-ignored equal pay rule.

The principle of equal pay for equal work was written into the Treaty of Rome, in 1958, which founded the European Economic Community. However, many member nations, including Belgium, did not apply it fully until recently. The stewardess, Gabrielle Defrenne, said she did work identical to that of male stewards, but for less money, between 1962 and 1963, when she retired.

The decision by the Market's Court said that regardless of national law, a litigant could claim equal pay solely under Market law.

But the seven-member panel of judges tempered the ruling by saying that only those who had filed claims with their court to date could win similar retroactive treatment. Otherwise, they said, thousands of European women might demand back pay, possibly bankrupting some concerns.

Definition Was Asked

Ireland and Britain had asked the Market court for such a definition of liability. Under the ruling, those countries and Denmark would have had to make back payments to women starting from 1973, when they began full membership in the community. The six original members would have had to make payments back to 1962, when the original five-year transition phase to observance of community laws ran out.

Ireland said it would find itself paying Government employees alone $90 million; and British officials said the bill for its Government an industry could have been $2 billion.

Sabena was obliged to pay Mrs. Defrenne $12,000. One of the court said they knew of no other pending cases.

The Common Market Court of Justice normally deals with antitrust and trade questions but recently it has begun extending its scope to cover the rights of individuals, ruling on the right of professional persons such as doctors and lawyers to work in all nine member countries.

Rioting Extremists In Rome Assault Government Offices

ROME, April 8 (AP)—Persons described by the authorities as leftist extremists rampaged through downtown Rome today, throwing firebombs at Government offices, police stations and offices of the Christian Democratic Party. The violence heightened tensions caused by Italy's political and economic turmoil.

The Christian Democrats rejected an offer by the Communist Party to help prop up their shaky minority government in exchange for a formal role in making policy. The Christian Democratic newspaper "Il Popolo" says that Communists could play a constructive role in Parliament while remaining in the opposition.

The Communists denounced the violence today as "provocation and hooliganism" and appealed to all workers to be vigilant.

Vatican Deplores Attacks

The Vatican newspaper "Osservatore Romano" condemned the firebomb attacks and urged the authorities to ban "demonstrations obviously fomenting new passions and offering opportunities for acts of criminal provocation."

In Milan, the latest of a series of fires believed set by arsonists heavily damaged the Motta Candy Company factory and put 3,000 employees out of work.

The police estimated that 3,000 leftist extremists threw at least 20 firebombs at the headquarters of the ruling Christian Democrats and at the Justice Ministry, injuring a policeman and a passerby. No serious damage was reported. The leftists were protesting the death of a youth shot during a firebomb attack on the Justice Ministry last night, the police said.

Mrs. Ryan Is Out on Bail In Trial in West Germany

DUSSELDORF, West Germany, April 8 (AP)—A New York City woman on trial on charges of having murdered Jews at a Nazi concentration camp in Poland has been freed on $17,000 bail provided by her husband, a defense attorney said today.

Hermine Braunsteiner Ryan, 56, was the only one of 15 defendants who had been held in custody since the trial began last November. She was extradited to West Germany in 1973 after having lost a five-year legal battle in United States courts.

Mrs. Ryan, a native of Austria, is one of five women and 10 men accused in the deaths of 250,000 Jews at the Majdanek concentration camp between December 1941 and early 1944.

CANAL TALKS BY BUNKER

sportedly Expects Panama Accord Soon

INGTON, April 8 (AP) — Senator J. P. Mohr at Large Ellis said today that a House subcommittee was no immediate threat to the Panama Canal. He said the subcommittee was set up to oversee the canal's operation, according to the House's chairman. Mr. Mohr testified behind closed doors before a House subcommittee for overseeing the canal.

Senator Leonor K. Sullivan, Democrat of Missouri, said during a hearing that he had strong concerns about how Mr. Mohr described the canal. "There's quite a bit of concern," Mrs. Sullivan said. "The hearing went into the details of the canal's operation. There's a strong concern about the erosion of the canal's authority on the Panama Canal."

She said that the existing Panama Canal grants to the United States the right to the exclusion of those rights of Panama. "I'm resolved that what we do is to transfer the Canal Zone without any authorization—illegal to do in the Canal Zone," Mrs. Sullivan declared. "I'm worried that the talks are casting uncertainty and doubt on the whole canal."

She said that the ultimate objective of the negotiations is to pass without the Canal Zone as to a new treaty of property. "The Hill concern over the matter was dramatic when they attempted to cut Department funds used to negotiate states sovereignty."

IGN POLICY D IN STUDY

A study of the role in world affairs included that the two elements of a sound foreign policy are leadership and public opinion, and the failures of the media in the 1970s. "Global Challenge States" was conducted under the auspices of the Institute of International Studies at Fairleigh Dickinson University. It was headed by Lester K. Born, former U.S. Supreme Court justice and Sunday editor of the New York Times, and Andrew Nathan, political analyst. The study involved interviews with government officials, government performances, polls and a series of discussions. Analysts say that the time could be a leadership issue, but that Congress takes a role in foreign policy. The study has attracted the news media attention and interest in foreign affairs. The study was published by the Association of Presses Inc., Newbury, N. J. 08512.

ots Appoint Chief Negotiator

Cyprus, April 8 — The Cabinet and all-Cyprus Council decided to accept the resignation of Nikos Clerides as Cyprus negotiator. The lawyer, Tassos Chrysostomides, is to replace him. Mr. Clerides, 56, who has been on Cyprus since the 1974 coup, remains in Cyprus. The House of Representatives was acting President for the first time in 1974. President Makarios III, a former Greek Cypriot, has been on Cyprus since the 1974 coup and is to Mr. Clerides with Turkish Cypriots.

Kudos to the first person who thought of wearing a poncho as a kind of adornment. Its style is ageless and its spirit intrepid, no matter the weather. I happen to go for the poncho in a big way. Water repellent poplin in cotton and polyester with vinyl trim, zip front and sash pockets. Natural color poncho with camel color trim, rayon lining, $46.

I don't plan to save this poncho for a rainy day, even though it's completely water repellent. I see it as a fair weather friend, also. Over my jeans, over my newest jumpsuit, it's the easiest way to cover myself when the weather is less than balmy. What's more, it reverses to super suede for a change of scenery. Zip-up cotton and polyester poplin camel color reverses to chamois colored polyester suede cloth. Water repellent poncho, one size fits all, $50.

I need plenty of breathing room and I've found it. No more worries about what I'm wearing underneath now that I've got my cape between me and the elements. It's a whole new freedom of dressing. Water repellent cape with kangaroo pockets and spacious hood. Polyester and cotton natural colored poplin, $56. Accessories Collections, Street Floor. Sorry, no mail or phone orders.

Whatever the weather, I'm going with the poncho in a big way... and it's from Saks Fifth Avenue

Hua's Rise Blurs Division of Peking Leaders Into 'Radicals' and 'Moderates'

UNIT SEEKS TESTING PORTUGAL REFUSED TO EXTRADITE C

By JOSEPH LELYVELD
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 8—The swift rise of Hua Kuo-feng to a position in the Chinese hierarchy that places him only a notch below Chairman Mao Tse-tung blurs the division of the Chinese leadership into two irreconcilable factions, the "radicals" and the "moderates."

Such factions have been discernible in Chinese politics since the early phases of the Cultural Revolution a decade ago, but there are many figures—of whom Mr. Hua is now the most conspicuous—who cannot easily be typed as members of a faction.

Terms Have Limited Value

In using the terms "radical" and "moderate," outside analysts have partly been reflecting the conventions of China's ideological polemics, which regularly refer to the "struggle between two lines" (the "left" and the "right"). Given the intricacy of leadership struggles in Peking and the secrecy in which they are cloaked, the convention that there were major responsibilities: Yao Wen-yuan, a leading polemicist, and Chang Chun-chiao, a seasoned politician who has probably been functioning as the party's secretary general.

In fact the analysts recognized all along that the terms were of limited value. "Words really don't work for an awful lot of people," a State Department official commented today, after running down the list of the 29 Politburo members who formed the top echelon of the Communist Party.

Of the 22, only four are normally termed "radicals." Their common denominator is that they are—or have been—close to Chairman Mao and that they rallied to his side in the early phases of the Cultural Revolution.

The four are Chiang Ching-kuo, others—two aging generals and three model workers—are presumed to have little or no political weight.

The rest—a full half of the man of the party three years ago but has yet to be given;

have backgrounds that are broadly similar to that of Prime Minister Hua. They sided with Chairman Mao in the Cultural Revolution but distinguished themselves as practical politicians and administrators, not ideologues. When the Chairman finally decided that the revolution had gone beyond permissible boundaries, they were there to restore order and rebuild the party.

Most of them worked closely with the late Chou En-lai and the man Prime Minister Chou selected as his successor, Teng Hsiao-ping, but they were prepared this week to scuttle Mr. Teng to prevent worsening factional strife.

Before the violent protests in Tian An Men Square on Monday, this element in the leadership appeared to have resisted the campaign for Mr. Teng's ouster that started in February, a month after the death of Mr. Chou. But if the detailed account by Hsinhua, the official press agency, can be accepted, the protesters relied on the traditional connotations of Chairman Mao's leadership.

Aiming at the Chairman

Using a metaphor that is often seen in Chinese polemics, Hsinhua asserted that the protesters had "directed their spearhead at our great leader, Chairman Mao." The account went on to quote them as protesting "The era of Chairman Shih Huang is gone."

Every Chinese pupil knows that Chin Shih Huang, the founder of the Chin Dynasty in the third century B.C., was the first emperor to unify China. But throughout Chinese history his name has been synonymous with tyranny because he killed thousands of officials who had fallen with him—was proof of backsliding to those who remained committed to the Cultural Revolution's values. On a personal level, a number of Mr. Teng's colleagues had every reason to imagine that he bore a grudge against them. It is impossible for outsiders to tell which went deeper: the personal mistrust or the ideological conflict. By his very survival, Mr. Hua has shown himself to be skilled at accommodation. Assuming that the test will be whether the "radical" element attempts to extend its attacks to followers of Mr. Teng.

Analysts will also be watching to see whether any attempt is made to fill the two vacancies that now exist in the standing committee of the Politburo, which normally has eight members. Counting Chairman Mao, three of the committee's members are of advanced age and probably unable to handle a vigorous day's work. If no appointments are made, it will be a sign that the leadership is too divided to statue on political as-moderate wreaths and posters began appearing at the Monument to the People's Heroes. The Chinese rendition of events is that the people at the monument were "openly hoisting the ensign supporting Teng Hsiao-ping." Although every foreigner on the square was looking for it, not one has reported hearing or reading a single explicit reference to Mr. Teng. The March 28 quotation from Mr. Mao suggests the reason: The people knew that Mr. Teng no longer had a political future.

It seems more likely that the moderate elements engineering events on the square were trying to influence deliberations already under way regarding the make-up of the leadership now that Mr. Teng had been disposed of. Specifically, the decisions that had to be made were the selection of a permanent Prime Minister and possibly also a new ranking order in the Communist Party.

Many Enthusiastic

The Chinese version charges that the homage to Mr. Chou was engineered by "a handful of class enemies," but it neglects to mention that many of the hundreds of thousands of people who came to the square seemed enthusiastic about what was happening.

In the face of this enthusiasm, the authorities put an abrupt end to the politically motivated tribute by removing all the wreaths and posters very early on Monday morning, and putting a cordon of security men around the square. There are some diplomats who believe that radical officials were not just confronting pro-moderate forces with this action but were actually trying to provoke them. This theory suggests that the radicals wanted to provoke an incident that would discredit the moderates.

But it seems more logical to assume that the radicals were angered and felt threatened by what was happening at the monument and believed they could demonstrate their power by putting an end to it.

A Full-Scale Riot

There was an incident, a full-scale riot that lasted 12 hours after Chinese angered by the action had broken through security cordons.

It is here that valid questions emerge: Why were the efforts to quell the riot so half-hearted and why were the rioters allowed to run rampant for 12 hours in the most prominent and most revered location in the entire country?

Some analysts wonder whether the authorities were concerned about the willingness of security units to intervene forcefully. Others believe that once the riot had started, some Chinese officials decided it was in their interests to let the riot burn itself out while discrediting the moderates.

There is still uncertainty about what direct effect the riot had on the decisions of the Politburo to oust Mr. Teng and appoint Mr. Hua as Prime Minister even though it seems likely, as already suggested, that Mr. Teng's fate had been decided before the riot, the Politburo resolution dismissing him from all his posts specifically links him to the riot.

The relationship if any between the riot and Mr. Hua's appointment is even more difficult to discern. But it is possible that the Politburo, in a deadlock between moderates and radicals over choice of a new Prime Minister, was disturbed enough by the events on the square to choose Mr. Hua, quickly as the compromise candidate.

New Miami Beach Signs

MIAMI BEACH, April 8 (UPI)—Miami Beach's city council has voted to allow businesses to install flashing neon advertising signs, despite warnings this community would become "Last Vegas East." Philip Sahlin, a councilman, who supported the proposal, said that "I don't want a honky-tonk, but we have to allow businesses to advertise themselves."

Vorster in Israel For Visit

TEL AVIV, April 8 (Reuters)—Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa arrived by air tonight for a four-day visit to Israel as guest of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Jetliner Hijacked In the Philippines Keeps Going West

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia, Friday, April 9 (Reuters)—Three Muslim gunmen who hijacked a jetliner over the Philippines Wednesday flew to Malaysia from Manila yesterday with two hostages and 10 crew members aboard.

They landed first at Kota Kinabalu, in the east Malaysian state of Sabah, and spent the night inside the plane at the airport. Malaysian authorities refused to allow the gunmen to disembark, and the plane was surrounded by 200 policemen while three armored cars stood nearby.

Refueled, the plane, a Philippine Air Lines twin-jet BAC-111, flew to Kuala Lumpur for another stop on a continuing trip westward, presumably to some Middle Eastern country. Further stops in Thailand and Sri Lanka were expected.

In Manila, an airline spokesman said a flight plan had been filed for the plane showing its ultimate destination as Benghazi, Libya, with stops in Bangkok, Calcutta, New Delhi, Teheran and Cairo.

At Manila yesterday the gunmen, who said they were members of a liberation front fighting for the establishment of an independent state in the predominantly Moslem southern part of the Philippines, demanded the release of four prisoners of the Philippine government and payment of a $50,000 ransom.

Though the demands were refused, the hijackers agreed to release the 72 passengers who had been aboard when they seized the plane soon after it had left the Mindanao city of Cagayan de Oro on what is to have been a flight across the southern island to Davao.

The agreement came when Rafael Igoa, vice president of the Philippine Air Lines, and Ben Yadao, assistant manager of the Manila station, boarded the plane as voluntary hostages.

The hostages freed in Manila reported that the gunmen did not speak to the passengers. One passenger said he saw the hijackers carrying guns. Another said he had seen a hand grenade.

When the plane arrived over the Kota Kinabalu airport, it encountered some difficulty in getting permission to land. At one point, one of the hostages, the airline executive, pleaded for permission, and it was granted only when the pilot told the control tower that he had only 20 minutes of fuel left in its tanks.

Plane, hijacked over southern Philippines, flew first to Manila, then to Kota Kinabalu and Kuala Lumpur.

Witness Says Schorr Received 'a Bum Rap'

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger says suggested CBS correspondent Daniel Schorr "got a bum rap" in the controversy over his role in publishing a secret report by the House Select Committee on Intelligence.

Mr. Schorr asked Dr. Kissinger at a Gridiron Club dinner what the Secretary thought of his case.

"I think you got a bum rap, especially since the essence of the report had already leaked before the report was published," Dr. Kissinger replied. "The blame should fall on whoever leaked the report, not on the journalist who received it."

House Approves Funds for Production of $21 Billion B-1 Bomber

By JOHN W. FINNEY
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 8—The House, in the first major test of Congressional sentiment on military spending, approved today funds for production of the Air Force B-1 strategic bomber that will ultimately cost $21 billion.

The House, by a 210-to-177 vote, rejected an amendment by Representative John F. Seiberling, Democrat of Ohio, that would have deferred use of the production funds until next February.

A prototype of the B-1 supersonic bomber making its maiden flight from Palmdale to Riverside, Calif.

The Defense Department, which plans to build 244 of the bombers for $21 billion, plans to make a decision in November on whether to place the bomber in production. In anticipation of a favorable decision, the Ford Administration has included $948 million in production funds in the new military budget.

Critics Attack Budget

The B-1 amendment offered to the annual military procurement authorization bill represented the major attack this year by Pentagon critics against the defense budget. Their basic argument was that there was no compelling need for Congress to make a commitment to production of the bomber until testing and development of the plane had been completed.

The debate produced a breakdown of the traditional alliance of lobbying groups that combine to fight for cuts in military spending. Some 37 public interest and religious groups had formed a lobbying coalition to stop the B-1 bomber program.

The Pentagon critics, however, found some of their usual allies in labor lobbying against them. Lobbying for the B-1 program outside the House chamber was Richard Warden, legislative director of the United Auto Workers, the labor union representing workers in the Rockwell International plant that is to build the bomber.

The major factor defeating the amendment in the opinion of many members of the House, was the shifting Congressional attitude against reductions in the defense budget.

In the two months leading up to today's vote on the House floor, the Administration has been contending that Soviet military power is growing and that the United States must increase its defense budget if it wants to maintain military power "second to none."

The Administration argument has had its impact on Capitol Hill, where there is considerable reluctance to make any significant reductions in the $113 billion military budget the Administration has proposed for the coming fiscal year. The budget is 4 percent larger than the one Congress approved last year.

The House Armed Services Committee had reported to the House a $33.4 billion military procurement bill authorizing $700 million more than requested by the Administration. The bill, which authorized weapons procurement and military research, covers about one-fourth of the total military budget.

House Panel's Actions

The House committee, however, deferred some shipbuilding costs and vetoed some economy measures proposed by the Administration, such as elimination of subsidies for military commissary stores and a 50,000-man reduction in the naval reserves. The net effect of the committee's bill, therefore, was to add about $2 billion to the Administration's defense program.

The House committee added $2.2 billion in Navy shipbuilding funds, primarily for the construction of nuclear-powered ships that Vice Adm. Hyman G. Rickover has been urging on the committee.

The Defense Department announced, meanwhile, that it would take steps to settle some $1.7 billion in claims brought by three major shipbuilders—General Dynamics, Newport News Shipbuilding and the Navy for increases in building—against the Navy for completing schedule.

icial Urges National Assessment as Hispanic-American Population Rises Sharply

The New York Times
GTON, April 8—The Hispanic-American population is rising sharply in two decades, it is estimated, raising complex implications for the country that planners and makers have scarcely assessed, according to a study by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The Hispanic-Americans are settling not only in such familiar areas as New York City, Miami and Los Angeles but also in a great tree-shaped sector with its thick trunk in Texas and its broad branches spreading up through the nation's center and outward along the Great Lakes.

In a speech prepared for delivery tomorrow in New York City, Mr. Holman describes the migration as a "blown tide" that resembles the movement of Southern blacks to Northern urban centers in the 1930's and 1940's, but with important differences.

Just as the huge migration of blacks was little noticed by Americans two decades ago in the Depression, the Hispanic-American migration today constitutes "an evolving internal problem with both national and international consequences that gets little attention from the thoughtful concerned citizens and enlightens leadership sectors of our society," Mr. Holman says.

Mr. Holman's speech was prepared for a luncheon meeting of the American Immigration and Citizenship Conference at the Plaza Hotel.

The consequences of neglecting to monitor and sort out the new population phenomenon could have "unimagined implications for the maintenance of social order in our country," he states, "or [be] a golden opportunity for us to start planning, organizing and devising the future scheme of things."

Population Sampling
The Community Relations Service was created in 1964 to serve as the mediator to smooth over the process of the integration of public accommodations. Since then it has played a conciliatory role in community conflicts arising out of school integration and easing local problems involving racial and ethnic groups.

The Census Bureau will conduct its first direct count of Hispanic-Americans in 1980. In 1970 an official estimate was made for the first time by taking a 5 percent population sample. The estimate was updated last year.

The official Census Bureau estimates Mr. Holman says, indicate the following:

While 60 percent of the people of Spanish origin live in the five Southwestern states (Arizona, California, Colorado, New Mexico and Texas, New York City has the largest concentration of them, with estimates running from 1.5 million to 2.5 million.

In the Chicago-Great Lakes area alone, there are more Hispanic-Americans than in the states of Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico combined.

Among 80.8 percent of the native-born and foreign-born Hispanics-Americans combined, Spanish was the most common language spoken, indicating the C.R.S. study that a growing number of communities are likely to become bilingual and bicultural. Underlining this development, Mr. Holman said are the increasing number of businesses in some cities, including New York, that display signs stating, "English spoken here."

Although some of the new migrants are professionals and businessmen, including many of the Cuban refugees in Miami and in Greater New York, most tend to be poorer and less educated than the national average.

Because of the youthfulness of the Hispanic-American population, its relatively high fertility rates and the prospect of continued population "pressure" from Mexico, the service concluded that this sector would outpace the rest of the nation.

Exception Is Cited
Generally, the nation, as in the case of the black migration, has done little to accommodate or adjust to the new migration, Mr. Holman says. One exception was legislation passed by Congress last year to protect the voting rights of citizens of Spanish origin.

Hispanic migrants, even more than the rest of the nation, tend to be concentrated in the cities. The 1970 Census estimates indicate that 83 percent live in urban areas.

With high unemployment nationally and a jobless rate among Hispanic-Americans that is double the national average, there have already been instances of friction between the newcomers and others, Mr. Holman indicates.

There have been a growing number of "confrontations" between the police and Hispanic-Americans, he says, and the police have been hampered by not having officers familiar with the new residents, their language and their cultures.

Mr. Holman emphasizes that the increase in Hispanic-Americans is a broad one.

"Cubans are now found in great numbers in Elizabeth, N.J., Puerto Ricans in Chicago are outnumbering white ethnics in what were once exclusive neighborhoods for Czechs, Poles and Lithuanians," he says. "Chicanos outnumber Indians in Utah. And our agency gets calls from Hispanics for assistance in such places as Burley, Idaho; Lancaster, Pa., and Omaha, Neb."

Mr. Holman believes that a number of changes are worth considering to avert problems. He contends that school boards should insist that urban teachers be bilingual, that is, that they not only speak but also understand Spanish, and teachers colleges should require Spanish language training for all teaching personnel.

Urban planning should take into account the particular needs of Spanish-speaking citizens and should include Hispanic leaders among the planners where possible, he says.

And Mr. Holman, who is black, chided social planners by saying, "We should stop doing any more demographic studies of our cities that project the needs of blacks or poor whites only."

Aliens in New York Area
As much as 80 percent of the estimated 1.5 million illegal aliens in the New York metropolitan area are from South America, Central America and the Caribbean, according to officials of the Immigration and Naturalization Service here.

Other nationalities represented, they said, include Chinese, Greeks (mostly crew members) who have jumped ship), Filipinos and Italians.

The considerable growth in illegal aliens here of Hispanic origin has occurred since 1965. Before that time, a citizen of a country in the Western Hemisphere could migrate to the United States by demonstrating to an American consul that he could support himself in this country.

Since 1965, however, there has been a ceiling of 120,000 immigrants each year from the Western Hemisphere, as well as other regulations that make emigration to the United States more difficult.

people in the agency's 10 regional offices have indicated a steady increase in communities across the country over the last 15 to 20 years.

The majority of the new residents are of Mexican origin, the service says; others are Puerto Ricans, Cubans and persons from Central and South America. The Census Bureau figures do not include residents of Puerto Rico itself.

INTRODUCING THE BEST MOTOR OIL IN THE WORLD.

Mobil 1 synthesized engine lubricant is an entirely new kind of motor oil.
It's man-made.

We've created new molecules to build an engine lubricant so tough that it outperforms ordinary motor oil.

What kind of car do you have to own to use Mobil 1?
Any kind.

From the most expensive luxury car to the least expensive economy car.

In fact, you don't have to know a thing about cars to appreciate the extraordinary advantages of Mobil 1.

Mobil 1 saves gas.
The first big advantage of Mobil 1 is that it saves gas. Mobil 1 lubricates the moving parts of your engine better than ordinary oil. Since it reduces friction and drag in the engine, you can get more miles out of every tankful of gas. As a matter of fact, Mobil 1 will give the average car up to 10 extra miles per tankful.

Mobil 1 saves oil.
But Mobil 1 does a lot more than just save gas: It also saves oil (if your engine is in good mechanical condition, of course). Mobil 1 doesn't evaporate as fast as ordinary motor oil, even at high engine temperatures. As a result, you use less oil. In both city and highway fleet tests, Mobil 1 cut oil consumption up to 25%.

Mobil 1 saves your engine.
Mobil 1 protects your engine better than ordinary motor oil. To prove it, we put Mobil 1 in a fleet of highway patrol cars for 12,000 miles. Then we tested the "used" Mobil 1 against ordinary motor oil. Mobil 1 still protected the engine like the brand-new ordinary oil.

And Mobil 1 not only helps your engine last longer. It helps it run cleaner. We've added a detergent to Mobil 1 that outperforms detergents found in ordinary motor oil.

Our tests showed that with Mobil 1 you'll have less engine sludge.

Mobil 1 improves high temperature performance.
Ordinary motor oil thins out at very high temperatures. Mobil 1, however, continues to spread a protective film over the moving parts of your engine even if the temperature on the outside is 110 degrees F. And the temperature inside the engine is 580 degrees F.

Mobil 1 improves cold weather starts.
In extremely cold temperatures, ordinary motor oil becomes so thick your engine can't turn over. But even at 35 degrees below zero, Mobil 1 will continue to flow and help you start your engine more easily.

So if you have a new car, use Mobil 1. Because Mobil 1 exceeds all car manufacturers' new car warranty requirements. If your car is older, you can still use Mobil 1.

No matter what kind of car you drive, or how hard you drive it, or what kind of weather you drive it in, we think Mobil 1 is the best motor oil you can buy.

Your Mobil dealer has the oil that saves you gas.

Harris Quits Active Role In Presidential Campaign

By CHARLES MOHR
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 8 — "Listen," he answered, "anybody who doesn't have any more friends than I do needs protection." Mr. Harris said amid laughter.

The former Oklahoma Senator told a news conference that he was still a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination but that it was "very unlikely" he could win. He said he would end his "national effort" in primary elections, scale down his staff and campaign headquarters and concentrate on influencing the Democratic platform, and possibly the selection of a nominee, in July.

The news conference was crowded with members of Mr. Harris's staff and political volunteers who had come from all over America to pay tributes to the short, heavy-set man who had inspired them. Mr. Harris turned the occasion into an unusual—but, for him, characteristic—moment of emotion, warmth and unpretentious respectation.

Mr. Harris had called his politics the "new populism." He said the overriding issue in the 1976 campaign was privilege, and he attacked concentrated wealth and called for "a widespread diffusion of economic and political power."

The Final Trench
In the New Hampshire primary last Feb. 24, he ran fourth with 11 percent of the vote; in the Massachusetts primary a week later, he was fifth with 8 percent. His campaign coffers empty, he abandoned plans to contest such states as Illinois and Wisconsin and prepared to make a last-ditch stand in Pennsylvania, but today, he said that "lack of money" had forced him to retreat from that final trench.

Of his showing in the early primaries, Mr. Harris said: "You couldn't call it victory because we didn't run that well. But we ran just well enough to keep going, and even some what to call it. We didn't know what to call it and we just decided to call it quits."

Mr. Harris had one of the largest—and most gifted—staffs in politics, and his staff members worked for nothing or next to it. Except for managing a private homes rather than hotels. Hundreds of his hosts across the country have certificates entitling them to spend one night in the White House, now probably no longer negotiable.

Potential for Tears
There was considerable potential for tears as Mr. Harris stood before his followers and friends, but he did not let his full-scale campaign end that way.

Recalling that he had finally accepted Secret Service protection last month after declining it for months, Mr. Harris said he was reminded of a man who ran for sheriff in Cotton County, Oklahoma, got almost too few votes to count, but appeared after the election with a pistol strapped to his hip. "Someone said, 'Woody, why are you wearing that pistol? You didn't get elected sheriff,'" through.

Senator Williams Plans to Run On Uncommitted Slate in Jersey

By RONALD SULLIVAN
Special to The New York Times

TRENTON, April 8 — Senator Harrison A. Williams Jr. announced tonight that he would run as an uncommitted delegate to the Democratic National Convention, thus joining the state party organization in New Jersey in its covert support of Senator Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota.

Mr. Williams's announcement, issued here by aides of State Senator James P. Dugan, the Democratic state chairman, came less than 24 hours after Governor Byrne gave a lukewarm endorsement to former Gov. Jimmy Carter of Georgia as the Democratic Presidential nominee.

While Mr. Byrne said he was still uncommitted, it was reported that he and his administration were giving active support to the Carter campaign organization in New Jersey.

Initially, both the Governor and Mr. Williams agreed to remain neutral in the June 8 Presidential primary, deciding to go to the convention as selected delegates rather than ones elected in the primary. New Jersey will send 108 delegates to the convention, the eighth-largest group, and its support there is regarded as a major political prize.

Violation of Neutrality
However, Democratic Party officials reported tonight that Senator Williams and Mr. Dugan regarded Mr. Byrne's support of Mr. Carter as a violation of their mutual neutrality pact, thus prompting the Senator's announcement that he would run with the party as an uncommitted delegate on its statewide slate.

The announcement could pre-

Physicians Install President
PHILADELPHIA, April 8 (AP)—Dr. Jack D. Myers, a professor of medicine at the University of Pittsburgh, was installed today as president of the 33,000-member American College of Physicians. Dr. James Clifton of Iowa City was chosen as president-elect of the college for the coming year.

Surrounded by admirers, Senator Hubert H. Humphrey signs autographs before addressing the annual state convention of the A.F.L.-C.I.O. taking place in Pittsburgh.

Humphrey Receives Aid in Pennsylvania

The state A.F.L.-C.I.O. is the most potent voting bloc in Pennsylvania, and the affection that the labor leaders showed for Mr. Humphrey could mean trouble for Mr. Carter and Mr. Jackson.

Their blueprint calls not only for the aggressive support of Senator Jackson wherever that seems promising, but also for vigorous efforts in behalf of Representative Morris K. Udall of Arizona, Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama and slates of uncommitted delegate-candidates.

The labor leaders will strive to deprive Mr. Carter, the current front-runner of so many delegates as possible. This approach is consonant with Senator Humphrey's vision of a nominating convention that will turn to him once again, because no one else, in the course of the primaries, gathered a majority of delegates.

Although some labor leaders here suggested that Senator Humphrey's abstention from the primaries would make a Presidential nomination for him impossible, they conceded that a successful "stop Carter" effort in Pennsylvania would at least keep him alive politically for a while.

Thus, the election here on April 27, from which Gov. Milton J. Sharp has withdrawn, has been transformed into what one observer called "the Armageddon of 1976," a contest of immense importance to the four men who are involved.

None of the three others—Mr. Udall, Mr. Carter and Senator Jackson—were invited to address the meeting. Although all of them made brief, informal sorties into the mass of delegates over the last two days, none of them expected or found the sort of welcome that Mr. Humphrey got when he walked into the crowded ballroom of the Hilton Hotel today.

With shouts and whistles, the men and women from union-affiliates greeted him with a standing ovation as he walked down the aisle to the yellow-draped dais.

There, with cameras flashing and the applause continuing unabated, he was fondly embraced by Harry Boyer, the state A.F.L.-C.I.O. president; Michael Johnson, the retiring executive vice president and chief political organizer for the unions; and Bayard Rustin, director of the A. Philip Randolph Institute.

"We need Humphrey!" the crowd chanted, and some men unfurled a 40-foot banner proclaiming, "Pennsylvanians for Humphrey" and paraded it across the foot of the hall.

That seemed to be all the inspiration the 64-year-old Senator required. As soon as he began to speak, he raised the delegates to new heights of enthusiasm. Time and again, they interrupted him with applause and foot-stomping and the chant "We need Humphrey! We need Humphrey!" However remote or realistic the Senator's prospects for the Democratic nomination may be, he looked and sounded like a candidate today.

His pink face glowed under the television lamps. His eyes sparkled, giving the appearance of tears, and his graying hair, seemingly tinted darker, was carefully coiffed.

His gestures were animated—times almost acrobatic, as when he stepped to the side of the microphone-studded lectern and bent over an imaginary football in referring to President Ford's collegiate experience as a center.

"He's still seeing everything upside down," Senator Humphrey said, borrowing a line from Governor Shapp. "The delegates loved all of this; he roared for more, and he gave it to them. The Republicans, he said, his voice rising higher and higher until it finally broke, are 'buc- Then, Senator Humphrey left the dais surrounded by well-wishers, a man who seemed to country 'into the ground' with whis- 19th century economic policies know quite well the meaning and a callousness toward hu- of hope.

Further Political Fund Delay

By WARREN WEAVER JR.
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 8 — Campaign subsidies for Presidential candidates may not be resumed until May, too late to help finance the next half dozen primaries, including key contests in Pennsylvania and Texas.

Senate and House conferees failed today for the second consecutive day to agree on a bill to revive the Federal Election Commission's power to authorize subsidy payments, increasing the likelihood Congress will recess for Easter without sending President Ford a bill.

The attempt to draft a compromise measure before lawmakers leave for 12 days next Wednesday has been complicated by the personal schedule of Representative Wayne L. Hays, Democrat of Ohio, chairman of the House conferees.

Senate Must Confirm
The conferees cannot meet again until Monday afternoon because Mr. Hays flew back to Ohio today for the weekend. They cannot meet after midday Tuesday because Mr. Hays is getting married that afternoon.

Tuesday noon, and their bill is accepted by both chambers on Wednesday—both of which are questionable—the Election Commission could not be reconstituted until the last week in April at the earliest.

This is because the commissioners, even if the President simply reappoints the incumbents, must be confirmed by the Senate, which will not go back into session until April 26.

Thus, under the most favorable timetable, which would assume prompt approval of the campaign bill by Mr. Ford, the commission could not authorize pending requests for matching funds for eligible candidates until April 29 or 30.

As a practical matter, candidates must usually make cash commitments at least 10 days to two weeks before a primary date, particularly for advertising expenses, so the failure of Congress to act appears to remove the possibility of subsidies for primaries in Pennsylvania (April 27), Texas (May 1), Alabama, the District of Columbia, Georgia and Indiana (May 4), Tennessee (May 6) and perhaps Nebraska and West Virginia (May 11) as well.

By the most optimistic estimate, the Federal money will become available to permit political planning on Michigan and Maryland on May 18 a later. If there are any delays in Congress, the White House, the free go on even longer.

Money Will Not Be
No candidate will likely money he earned in private campaign if it will all be paid for by a revived commission. Question is, how long successfully a candidate borrow against this as while depending on can raise privately.

If and when the commission regains its powers, it may a new candidate for subsidies—Senator C. Byrd, Democrat of Virginia. He is a self-proclaimed favorite son, but he has been in raising $5,000 of 20 states in an attempt to raise $250 and less and thus for matching.

An aide to Mr. Byrd today said the Senator not apply for the funds, the Associated Press reported.

As of this week, no dates have been submitted for almost $1.3 million in subsidies since the freeze the bill, complete work by become available to permit effective March 23.

ment action to enforce equal built with Federal assistance.

He restated the position he took on Tuesday, saying, "I would not arbitrarily use Federal force to move people of a different ethnic background into a neighborhood just to change its character."
He acknowledged, at the same time, that he was attacking a kind of "arbitrary action" that had not been proposed or taken, saying, "I don't think the Congress or anybody else has advocated this."
When a reporter asked whether he was creating "a straw man, something that doesn't exist," Mr. Carter replied, "yes, that's correct." Yet, he insisted that he had not been trying to play politics with the overtones of his words.
"If the phrase had racial connotations," he said, "I've apologized, I hope, to the public, and I've already talked to my supporters."
Mr. Udall praised Mr. Carter for his swift apology, but he commented that the timing of Mr. Carter's earlier words was nonetheless "remarkable" — coming, Mr. Udall said,
"when [Gov. George C.] Wallace [of Alabama] is leaving the race and Pennsylvania and Michigan are coming up."
Mr. Carter said he would sooner "withdraw from the race" than use "racist" appeals to win it. "My feelings are quite the opposite of that," he said. Blacks and others who know his record as Governor of Georgia will understand that his words on Tuesday were "careless," Mr. Carter said.

Jimmy Carter greeting a supporter and her children at Philadelphia rally Wednesday

But he was also prepared to pay some political penalty. "If they don't try to make political hay out of it," he said, referring to Mr. Udall and Mr.
Jackson, "I would be surprised."
Mr. Young saw the danger of causing damage, observing: "A lot of people who said 'You just can't trust a Southerner' are going to say, 'See, I told you, so.'"
Mr. Young was torn today between defending Mr. Carter and denouncing his language.
"This doesn't mean to me he's a racist," he said. "It means he made a terrible blunder that he's got to recover from."
"I just think it's an awful phrase. I don't think he understood how loaded it is with Hitlerian connotations. My theme all along," Mr. Young continued, "has been that white liberals would eventually follow blacks to support him. But this gives them some reason not to A lot of white liberals will hesitate, and blacks who don't know him personally will wait and see what he means."

"Those of us who do know him know he's had a good record on open housing," Mr.
Young said. "He's kind of put himself into this trap. It wasn't Udall, Jackson or Humphrey.
Nobody baited this for him.
He's got to find a way to get out—and frankly I hope he does."
Many prominent Pennsylvania Democrats, both black and white, saw the "ethnic purity" controversy as a shaping event in their primary.
Chuck Stone, the black strategist and author, used his Philadelphia Daily News column this morning to call Mr.
Carter, famous for his toothy smile, a "mandibular phony."

He praised Mr. Carter as the only candidate who campaigned aggressively for black votes in all the primaries," but this week, in Mr. Stone's analysis, "Carter quickly moved to reassure white America he was still their 'good ol' boy' and called for a new kind of segregation by homogeneity."
Some black leaders, meanwhile, were completely soothed by Mr. Carter's apology and explanation. Others reserved judgment.
"I was satisfied with the explanation he gave," said Ann Jordan, a member of the Democratic National Committee.
"He said he would not use the powers of the Presidency to impose on a community low-cost housing in any setting. It's the press that's making this a major issue."

Aides Say Ford Will Clinch Nomination Despite Some Gains by Reagan Forces

By JAMES M. NAUGHTON

WASHINGTON, April 8 — President Ford's campaign aides conceded today that Ronald Reagan would score some coups as the battle for the Republican Presidential nomination moves west and south, but they said Mr. Ford would still clinch the nomination in early June.

"We're not conceding delegates, we're conceding reality," said Peter F. Kaye, the President's campaign spokesman.

"We're not going to win every state's delegation but we're going to win delegates in every state."

'Symbolic' Victories Past

The President had hoped to force the former California Governor out of the contest with a series of victories in the early primaries. But now he expects a marathon contest because of Mr. Reagan's victory two weeks ago in North Carolina and his apparent edge in several Sunbelt states.

Well-placed aides said that Stuart Spencer, the deputy chairman and leading tactician of the President Ford Committee, advised the President yesterday that he could trail Mr. Reagan in some state conventions, finish second in the Texas primary on May 1 and lose the winner-take-all primary in California on June 8 but still sew up a first-ballot nomination.

In furtherance of that goal, Mr. Ford's political aides have begun stressing the President's 3-to-1 lead in committed delegates and minimizing the likely effect of successes Mr. Reagan may have in the deep South and West.

"You can give him all of California and he still won't make it," Mr. Spencer said in an interview.

"Delegates," Mr. Kaye echoed. "That's where it is from now on. We're past the 'symbolic' primary victories."

With his victory Tuesday in Wisconsin, Mr. Ford has 251 committed delegates to 84 for Mr. Reagan. There are 168 technically uncommitted, although most are in New York, where Vice President Rockefeller heads a delegation the White House considers friendly to Mr. Ford.

Assuming that Mr. Ford is backed by all but a few of the New York delegates, and counting on the 103 in Pennsylvania, where Mr. Ford is running but Mr. Reagan is not, Mr. Kaye said:

"By the time we get to Texas we'll be halfway home" toward the 1,130 delegates needed for nomination.

"After that, we'll win a lot and lose a few but by June 8 we'll be there," he said.

John P. Sears, the director of Mr. Reagan's campaign, said last week that he was hoping to capture 700 of the nearly 1,000 delegates yet to be secured in the West and South in states with Republican electorates similar to that of North Carolina.

Ford's Strategy

In winning a popular majority in North Carolina, however, Mr. Reagan won only a slight majority of the state's delegates, 28 to Mr. Ford's 25. The strategy devised for Mr. Ford now is to try to do comparably well in delegate contests in states most compatible to Mr. Reagan and to overwhelm Mr. Reagan in the remaining industrial and Middle Western states.

Mr. Ford has said he was the underdog in the fight for 100 Texas delegates. Mr. Spencer agreed with that assessment but traveled today to Texas to make a fresh estimate of Mr. Ford's prospects.

Mr. Spencer said that the President would work hard in Texas to break even on delegates or possibly win a narrow majority.

"If we can beat [Mr. Reagan] in Texas we can win California," Mr. Spencer said. "My friends in California go with the winner—the Dodgers draw and the Giants don't."

According to Ford aides, the President's confidence in a first-ballot victory is based on the following assumptions:

Mr. Ford will win most of the 391 delegates from Indiana, New Jersey, Ohio, West Virginia, Maryland, Michigan, Oregon, Rhode Island, Minnesota, Maine, Hawaii, Iowa, Delaware and Connecticut.

The President will at least split with Mr. Reagan and more likely gain a modest edge in dividing the 564 delegates from Texas, Tennessee, Nebraska, Idaho, Kentucky, Montana, Virginia, Kansas, Alaska, Wyoming, North Dakota, South Dakota, Missouri, Washington, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah.

Mr. Ford will fare poorly but get some delegates among the 272 selected in Georgia, Alabama, Arkansas, Nevada, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arizona, and South Carolina.

Ford, Nixon and 1976

Polls Appear to Suggest Ex-President Is Liability to Successor in Campaign

By PHILIP SHABECOFF

WASHINGTON, April 8 — In the new movie, "All the President's Men," there is a film clip showing Gerald R. Ford, then a member of Congress and chairman of the 1972 Republican National Convention, announcing that Richard M. Nixon had won the party's Presidential nomination.

The scene — in a movie that will undoubtedly be attended by millions of Americans — is one more example of the difficulty President Ford is having in this election year in freeing himself from his association with Mr. Nixon in the public's mind.

The new book about Mr. Nixon by Robert Woodward and Carl Bernstein, "The Final Days," in which Mr. Ford plays a role as Vice President, will be another. So, too, will be a paperback edition of "All the President's Men" which will be issued soon.

So far, Mr. Nixon, the Presidential paragon of Mr. Ford and Watergate generally have not been overt campaign issues, because Mr. Ford's rival for the Republican Presidential nomination, Ronald Reagan, has been in no position to make them so. As one of Mr. Nixon's staunchest defenders almost until the bitter end, Mr. Reagan can hardly bring up Watergate with good grace.

Issue Brought Up

But the Democratic candidate will presumably be under no such constraint, particularly if it is Jimmy Carter, much of whose success in the primary elections has been attributed to the supposed anti-Washington mood of the country. Some commentators have expressed the opinion that the mood is anti-Watergate rather than anti-Washington.

Mr. Carter has said that he does not intend to bring up the Watergate issue. But he has done so repeatedly, indirectly, by talking about the need for morality in government and stressing that he has not been tainted by serving in Washington.

Other Democratic candidates have brought up the issue from time to time. Representative Morris K. Udall, who advocates amnesty for all Vietnam War deserters, argues that President Ford should support amnesty because he granted it to Mr. Nixon.

Reporters traveling with the candidates have found that voters around the country do not ask many questions about Watergate and Mr. Nixon. But the reporters also found that these are very much on people's minds. When questioned at any length, voters often mention their lack of trust in politicians and ask about Mr. Ford's pardon of Mr. Nixon.

Even the Republican right wing has attacked Mr. Ford for his association with the former President. Calling last week for Mr. Ford to drop out of the race for the nomination, James C. Roberts, executive director of the American Conservative Union, said that Mr. Ford "owes his office not to the Republican party, but to Richard M. Nixon," who, with Congressional acquiescence, made him Vice President.

'Issue Is Behind Us'

In the White House and at Ford campaign headquarters, the President's aides insist that Mr. Nixon will not be a major issue in the 1976 Presidential campaign.

On his first day as the new chairman of the President Ford Committee, Rogers C.B. Morton said at a news conference: "The whole Nixon issue is behind us. I really don't think he will be a factor in this election."

Mr. Morton's comment sounded like the wishful thinking that marked the latter days of the Nixon Administration, that could hurt Mr. Ford this year.

A Political Asset

An official at the Ford campaign committee said that Mr. Nixon could be as much of a political asset as a liability to the President, because Mr. Ford could stress the difference between the conduct of his Administration and that of his predecessor's.

The official said that private polls taken by the Ford committee indicated that the pardon of Mr. Nixon may be an issue in the election, but otherwise the voters displayed little interest in Watergate as a political theme this year.

"If the economy is good, and our record in foreign affairs looks good on Election Day, then Watergate will have little impact on the results," the official said.

And Ron Nessen, the White House press secretary, commenting on the impact of "All the President's Men" and the new book, "The Final Days," said that Mr. Ford's political fortunes, said that the White House view was that the movie and the book would affect this President about as much as Chappaquiddick affects Hubert Humphrey.

However, the results of public opinion polls do seem to suggest that Mr. Nixon has been and continues to be a liability to the President. Mr. Ford's pardon of the man who appointed him Vice President led to a precipitous drop in his popularity, a drop from which he has yet to recover.

Shortly before the pardon, the Gallup Poll found that 71 percent of the people it surveyed approved of the way Mr. Ford handled his office. After the pardon, his rating sank as low as 37 percent.

In the most recent survey, taken in late February and early March, the President made a sharp improvement to the approval rating of 50 percent.

But he is still far below where he stood before the pardon. While the Nixon trip to China did not cause the President that some of his political strategists had feared, it did have some impact.

Political Problems

The chances are that the next time Mr. Nixon makes headlines, and each time after that, he will create political problems for his successor.

Meanwhile, President Ford seems to have taken no special pains to increase the distance between himself and Mr. Nixon. The President still goes beyond the demands of protocol to telephone Mr. Nixon from time to time for personal chats. He did not publicly criticize Mr. Nixon for traveling to China.

One White House aide explained that Mr. Ford believes a former President should be treated with deference, and he behaves accordingly to Mr. Nixon. That may be all there is to the relationship, but it is, nevertheless, a relationship that could hurt Mr. Ford this year.

Cunningham Opponents Make Few Inroads in Primary Vote

By THOMAS P. RONAN

Conservative and Liberal county leaders indicated that all but one of the incumbents were sure of re-election.

The exception was in Staten Island, where the primary election was held. In the attempt by a faction backing the Liberal Party's state leadership to oust an insurgent group controlling the borough.

Among the incumbents facing little opposition were Meade H. Esposito and Borough President Donald R. Manes, the Democratic leaders in Brooklyn and Queens, respectively; George L. Clark Jr., Republican leader in Brooklyn; the Conservative leaders in Brooklyn and Queens, and the Liberal leaders in all the boroughs but Staten Island.

In Brooklyn, Representative Shirley Chisholm's political power in the Bedford-Stuyvesant area was enhanced when the Democratic candidates she backed defeated some of those supported by her political enemy, Councilman Samuel D. Wright. Among the casualties was State Senator Vander L. Beatty, a Wright supporter.

Hard Work Pays Off for Delegate Candidate

By FRANK LYMAN

The statewide voter turnout in the New York Democratic Presidential primary last Tuesday was a low 20 percent. But, in the 18th Election District in upstate Scotia, 53 percent of the 139 enrolled Democrats turned out after considerable prodding by the Democratic county committee members and woman in that district.

The two county committee members were well-motivated to get out the vote. One of them, John Festino, a 66-year-old retired business executive, was a candidate for national convention delegate uncommitted to any Presidential candidate. The other was his wife Lena.

The electioneering paid off. When the returns were counted, Mr. Festino had 58 votes, the rest of his slate 54 of 55 votes and the nearest competitor, nine votes. "I told you I was going to work my district and I did," said a jubilant Mr. Festino after the primary dust had settled.

Jimmy Carter of Georgia, prof. James Dupree, the 40-year-old chairman of the social sciences department at Onondaga Community College, was defeated by an uncommitted slate in the 32d Congressional District in the Syracuse area.

Mr. Festino, one of the victors in the 30-square-mile 28th Congressional District, which includes parts of Albany, Schoenectady and Montgomery Counties, was also running as an uncommitted delegate but was leaning toward Senator Jackson.

"Jackson? I can give you a half-and-half answer," said Mr. Festino, who added that he had detected considerable Jackson sentiment in his election district but who was not yet prepared to swing to the Senator. Unabashed "regular" Democrat, Mr. Festino was clearly waiting the signal of Democratic leaders in his Congressional district.

District Conquered

He had counted on these leaders to "deliver" the vote in other parts of the sprawling Congressional district, but he and his wife had covered their own part of the district like a glove, personally visiting the homes of the 139 Democrats last Saturday and Monday, the day before the primary. "She did the boulevards and I did the streets," Mr. Festino said, referring to the different block names in his district.

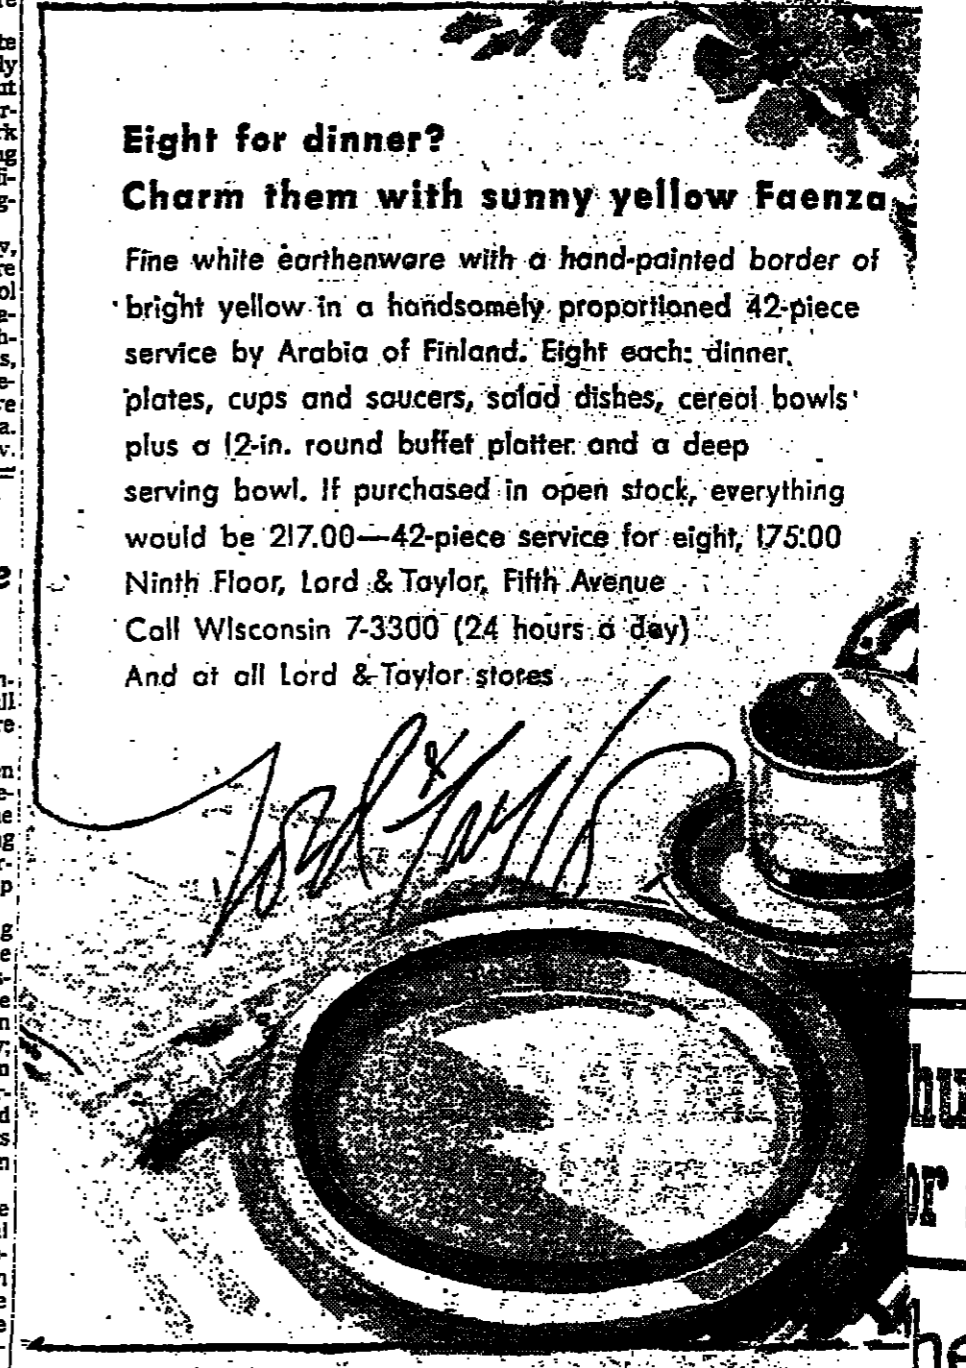

On primary day, for example, he got up at 4:30 A.M. and went to the Gramercy-Stuyvesant Independent Democrats Club for a breakfast of orange juice, bagels, lox and coffee with other Udall-workers. He then went to a public school on East 20th Street to help open the poll and check that the voting machine counters were blank—a necessary precaution.

Mr. Tibbets shook hands outside the polling place until 9 A.M. when he went to work and was back that evening an hour before the polls closed for another round of electioneering. He said that the reaction of voters was "so positive to me" that he became optimistic that he would win. As it developed, Mr. Udall and his delegates swept the district.

Mr. Tibbets, who has been working on the Udall campaign since last summer, expects to spend a couple of weekends in Pennsylvania where his parents live, and in Connecticut where he went to school.

Miss Berg said she was surprised by the primary not only because of the victory but also because of the poor showing of Mr. Carter in the poll. "I've been a Kennedy fan since I was a child," she said. "I was one of the first strong feelings, probably in the delegates' ranks, for the Presidential campaign."

Mr. Dupree, the new Carter delegate, said he was disappointed but still supported Mr. Carter to the extent he was willing to work for the United Federal Teachers in Queens, and the children "went I when they saw her in the ballot."

The discovery of the Ruggieri connection was made by W. Howard Adams, the curator of the exhibition, in reading Jefferson's letters while preparing for the show, he found a reference in the Jefferson-to-Cosway letter of Oct. 12, 1786—the famous "my head and my heart" letter—recalling a day of sightseeing in Paris that they had spent together:

"Well, after dinner to St. Cloud [presumably to view the palace and gardens there], from St. Cloud to Ruggieri's . . .

Maria Cecilia Cosway was a miniature painter with whom Jefferson reportedly fell in love. Not much is known about their relationship, nor is it known whether anything serious took place between them. But when Mrs. Cosway left Paris, Jefferson sent her a letter indicating his strong feeling for her.

Mr. Adams also discovered an "obscure little pamphlet" about Ruggieri's and another "pleasure garden" of 18th-century Paris, similar to the amusement gardens or parks in England, such as London's Vauxhall Gardens, or to the Tivoli Gardens in Copenhagen.

And, finally, Mr. Adams noticed a listing for Ruggieri, fireworks-maker, in the Paris telephone book, with an address on the Rue la Boetie Off the Champs-elysees, not far from where Jefferson lived.

It proved to be the very same concern, still flourishing and capable of producing the sort of fireworks in vogue 200 years ago.

The theme of the spectacular will be "the triumph of reason and order over chaos and war," and its very grand finale will show the facade of Monticello, followed by the apotheosis, or "grande girande," a huge sun bursting into radiance behind the facade.

In the outline proposal submitted by Ruggieri, there are precise terms to describe different sorts of fireworks, such as maroons, starflower pots, volcans, bouillons, storm shells, spider shells and papillon d' or Roman candles.

The program will begin about 9:15 P.M., with a concert of French 18th-century music played by the National Gallery Orchestra. For some of the invited guests it will be preceded by dinner in the gallery and a preview of the Jefferson exhibit.

SENATE APPROVES FOOD STAMP BILL

Reform Sets Income Ceiling of $8,000 for Families to Qualify for Aid

By NANCY HICKS
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 8—The Senate reached final agreement today on a food stamp reform bill that, for the first time, would set a gross income ceiling for participants in the program and standardize the way they qualify for benefits.

The legislation now goes to the House, which has been holding hearings but has not completed committee action on a companion measure.

To Aid Poor With Jobs

Whatever both houses agree on for computing benefit levels is expected to save money in administrative costs and to lower the error rate. One-quarter of participating families now receive too many or too few stamps.

The vote today followed four full days of debate in which the Senators voted down more than 20 attempts by Senator Allen and Senator Carl T. Curtis, Republican of Nebraska, to make the program more restrictive.

The argument showed that there were very few places to make meaningful cuts, unless the Senate was willing to keep students who are heads of fam-

Crisis Over Silber Presidency Grows at Boston U.

By GENE I. MAEROFF
Special to The New York Times

BOSTON, April 8—A succession of no-confidence votes in the administration of Dr. John R. Silber, the president of Boston University, and a demand for his ouster by 10 of the university's 15 deans have brought a crisis to the 18,000-student campus.

The conflict represents a boiling over of resentments that have been accumulating over the five stormy years of Dr. Silber's presidency.

In the latest move aimed at persuading the institution's trustees not to allow Dr. Silber to continue in office, the Faculty Senate today voted, 277 to 117, to ask for his resignation. Dr. Silber, who was hired by Boston University after being dismissed as dean of sciences at the University of Texas in a showdown with the trustees, said that he had no intention of resigning.

But the vote today, following no-confidence votes earlier this week by 10 of the institution's 15 schools and colleges, seems almost certain to be taken into consideration by the trustees, who are now evaluating the first five years of the Silber administration.

"We want to listen to everything," Hans Eslin, a Boston financier, who is chairman of the university's trustees, said today. "We're not ignoring anything and we hope soon to come up with a solution to what's going on."

Many of the complaints against the 49-year-old former philosophy professor center on his acerbic, quick-tempered style of leadership. He has been accused by his critics of mainly delegating decisionmaking. The conflict comes at a time when Boston University, a private university with a relatively small endowment of $25 million, is in the midst of trying to adjust its $128 million budget to cope with continuing problems of dwindling enrollments and rising costs.

Ninety untenured professors were told in December that their contracts would not be renewed and Dr. Silber has indicated that other faculty reductions, including the possible dismissal of tenured professors, will be needed in the future.

Dr. Silber's supporters maintain that the anxiety of faculty members and deans over the cutbacks is responsible for current attacks on Dr. Silber, but critics assert that causes for dissatisfaction are much deeper.

"He was diverting the issue by implying the controversy is a matter of the allocation of one college over another," Dr. Robin E. Esch, chairman of the mathematics department, said of Dr. Silber at today's faculty meeting.

"The issue is mismanagement," Dr. Silber, as president of the university, was cast in the peculiar role of presiding over a gathering at which his removal was being discussed. He spent the first hour of the meeting delivering an unemotional defense of his administration.

"The financial stability of this institution and the enhancement of its academic reputation in my opinion vastly surpass in importance all questions of style and manners," he said. "Let me acknowledge my wars, my defects, my idiosyncrasies and let us get on with the building of our future."

As a result of the income ceiling and a new standard deduction formula, about a million people would be dropped from the program under the Senate bill, but those still in low-qualified would have their benefits increased. The standard deduction would replace the current practice of determining eligibility by using itemized deductions to determine net income, on which benefits are based.

Currently, those whose net income falls below $6,636 can qualify. The new bill would lower that figure to the current official poverty line of $5,500 for a family of four.

In figuring net income under the new bill, welfare families would be able to deduct $100 and working families save $241 million over the existing law in fiscal year 1977.

The work- ing families would also be able to deduct the cost of their Federal, state, local and Social Security taxes, in determining net income.

Under current law, a welfare family of four with a $300-a-month income would pay about $65 for the $166 in coupons that the Agriculture Department says it need for a nutritious diet.

Under the President's proposed regulations, it would pay $50 for those same coupons. Under the committee's original bill, it would pay $60. Under the bill that passed, it would pay $50.

A big difference, though, can be seen in what happens to a family of four whose income is earned under all plans. Under current law, a family with a gross income of $665 a month would probably pay about $122 for the same $166 in food stamps.

Listen to The People.

A recently completed research study shows:

- 8 out of 10 adult residents of New York State believe that savings banks should be allowed to offer their customers the same full, unlimited checking account services commercial banks offer.
- 3 out of 4 feel that permitting checking accounts at commercial banks but not at savings banks is "a form of discrimination against savings banks."

The people want checking accounts at Savings Banks. And they want them now.

All other states in the Northeast—New Jersey, Massachusetts, Vermont, Maine, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Connecticut—allow savings banks to offer checking accounts. Why not New York? Legislation is needed. Write to your Assemblyman and State Senator today.

4 HOUSE MEMBERS BALK ON CITY AID

Focus on Services Demanded by Badillo, Mrs. Chisholm, Rangel and Richmond

By FRANCIS X. CLINES

Members of the House of Representatives from four of the city's more impoverished districts said yesterday that they would oppose any further Federal loan assistance to New York City unless the money was intended for the city's residents rather than its bankers.

Complaining about the severity of the city budget cuts thus far, particularly in poor and minority-group neighborhoods, the four lawmakers, all Democrats, declared that a policy of default and reorganization of the city debt was "perhaps the only viable alternative" left to the city as it faces a new wave of personnel and service cuts.

Representative Herman Badillo of the Bronx contended that the Federal seasonal loans extended last December to the city had been going largely to bankers and other city creditors, while local residents have been absorbing the cost of the debt service in reduced services and lost jobs.

Complaining about the severity of the city budget cuts thus far, particularly in poor and minority-group neighborhoods, the four lawmakers, all Democrats, declared that a policy of default and reorganization of the city debt was "perhaps the only viable alternative" left to the city as it faces a new wave of personnel and service cuts.

The Managerial Employees Association, a group representing the city's 2,000 middle-management administrators, announced that they were considering Federal court action in an effort to catch up with the wage increases granted in the last three years to the city's unionized workers.

Raymond Diana, representative of the association, said he had been unable to get a clear commitment from either state or city officials for a retroactive wage increase despite the fact, he said, that his members had received none of the 14 percent in wage increases extended to the municipal rank-and-file workers since July 1974, and none of the additional cost-of-living increases.

Albany Reports Disparities in Home Insurance Rates

The house refers to the further explanation of the price spread, and an official of the Insurance Company of North America expressed surprise when told that such a spread existed.

Policies for homeowners and tenants provide protection against several kinds of dangers, including fire, theft and the possibility that someone will sue because of an injury suffered on the premises.

Some of the companies listed in the guide have raised their rates since it was compiled. According to the Insurance Department, the increases range from an average of 17.7 percent by Nationwide to an average of 1.6 percent by the Insurance Company of North America.

Albany Senate Voting On Veto of Stavisky Bill

ALBANY, April 8—The State Senate was poised here tonight for a second attempt to override Governor Carey's veto of the Stavisky city school budget bill, with the Republican majority predicting that the attempt would succeed.

The minority Democrats, whose numbers are sufficient to block the two-thirds vote necessary to quash the veto, remained locked in conference as the Republicans waited for the session to begin.

After an hour and a half of caucusing, the Democrats' deputy minority leader, Robert Garcia of the Bronx, said he expected his membership to "hold" in sustaining the veto.

Both sides on the issue agreed that if the veto was quashed, it would not necessarily result in the city's being forced to restore some $150 million to the public school budget—the price tag Mayor Beame, in opposing the Stavisky bill, has put on it.

Instead, Senators, Board of Education officials and legislative staffs agreed, overriding the veto would set the stage for substantive negotiations between the New York City school board and the United Federation of Teachers, which favor the Stavisky bill, and the state to find a compromise that would soften the legislation's impact.

The measure, named after its chief sponsor in the Assembly, Leonard P. Stavisky, Democrat of Queens, would require the city to earmark no less than 21.46 percent of the city expense budget for the public schools.

Washington's Fiscal Role in New York

By MARTIN TOLCHEN

WASHINGTON, April 8—Mayor Beame doesn't want Governor Carey to run his city, does he want the President of the United States to be Acting Mayor of New York City?

The question was asked by President Ford during a speech at the National Press Club last October. He added: "I see a serious threat to the legal relationships among our Federal, state and local governments in any Congressional action which could lead to disruption of this traditional balance."

He was citing such a threatened imbalance as one of the major reasons he then proposed Federal aid to avert default by the city.

Nobody has suggested that Mr. Ford is now the Acting Mayor of New York, but some have discerned a marked intrusion by the Federal Government into local decision-making since Washington agreed to provide $2.3 billion in loans to New York.

Last week, for example, the Treasury Secretary, William E. Simon, told Congress that New York City's rent control was "inequitable as well as economically" and that fringe benefits for municipal employees, the city's contribution to health insurance, uniform allowances, union welfare funds and annuity funds should be carefully studied.

The possibility of moving to a 40-hour week, thus achieving substantial reductions in costs without a loss in services, should be examined," Mr. Simon also told the Senate Banking Committee. It was holding oversight hearings on the Federal loans, which Mr. Simon must approve each month. Last Tuesday, Senator William Proxmire, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, called the transit settlement "a tragic mistake" because it provided increased cost-of-living benefits that could set a precedent for other unions.

For union leaders, the Federal pressures to economize by reducing employee benefits and rent control are suspect. "If we make a loan, as we did, they certainly have the right to audit us," said Victor Goberman, executive director of the largest union of municipal employees—District Council 37 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees.

"But when they begin to comment on contracts, rent control benefit administrative operations, then they go into a policy area that I find distressing," he added. "Once they start getting into areas of policy, it's a hell of a situation."

Stephen Berger, chief administrative officer of the state's Emergency Financial Control Board, said of the statements of Federal officials: "I think they are a perfect legitimate role for them to play. Nobody has said to us, if you don't take away your rent control, we're going to take away your left sneaker."

Indeed, although the Deputy Treasury Secretary, Mr. Gerard, talks almost daily with Deputy Mayor Kenneth S. Axelson, and although the Federal officials have been outspoken in pointing up the areas in which they are adamant about leaving policy decisions up to the city.

There are enough pitfalls in being President without adding the woes of being Mayor of New York, a Treasury Department official said. Nevertheless, there have been calls for more Federal intervention. In testimony before the Senate Banking Committee, Joel W. Harnett and Burton H. Marks, chairman and president of the City Club of New York, urged that "following the model of declaring disaster areas in the wake of floods, fires and tornado, our city be declared a managerial disaster area and appropriate aid be brought in."

Hearing on City Is Scored as 'Political'

Peter Peyser did this on his own, for political reasons. Representative Edward I. Koch, Democrat of Manhattan, said that "it was more in the nature of a single member's involvement as opposed to a delegation involvement."

At the hearing, two dozen New York City businessmen said that despite what they regarded as onerous local taxes and a lack of amenities, they planned to remain in the city because it was "the center of the action" in the words of Philip Walsh, vice president of the Newmont Mining Corporation.

The same general point was made by most of the other participants, including officials of the New York Stock Exchange and executives of American Express, Oppenheimer & Company, Consolidated Edison, McGraw Hill, the Celanese Corporation, Bristol Myers, Chase Manhattan Bank, Citicorp, the Anchor Savings Bank and Arthur Andersen & Company.

SELF-COUNSEL IN AGE

Though much is lost, strange victory has been won, Exult, my heart; put hope and fear away; Sing for your own delight—though there be none To bear you out, sing on while yet you may; Give thanks for all glad hours beneath the sun; For peace and eventual liberation pray, Now the high lonely stars of night come on.

Death, Wheelock Poems Toll for Thee

By WARREN HOGE. John Hall Wheelock, an 89-year-old man in a position to know, was asked about old age. "As life goes on, it becomes more intense," the poet said in a sturdy voice, "because there are tremendous numbers of associations and so many memories."

Wheelock read seven new unpublished poems were such fellow poets as Muriel Rukeyser, Richmond Latimore, Babette Deutsch and John Ciardi; the artists Raphael Soyer, Balcomb Greene, Joseph Hirsch, Isabel Bishop, Chaim Gross, Dorothea Greenbaum and Seymour Lipson; the composers Elliott C. Carter, Otto Luening and Hugo Weisgall, and the writers Paul Horgan, Edgar Johnson, Matthew Josephson, Joseph Mitchell and Harrison Salisbury, currently president of the institute.

Johanna Meier—Calm Diva in Demand

By ALLEN HUGHES. About 6 o'clock this evening, Johanna Meier will walk out on the stage of the Metropolitan Opera for the first time to take a look at the scenery for "Ariadne auf Naxos." Some two hours later, she will rush out on stage as the temperamental Prima Donna in the work and begin her Met debut without having had either a full stage or orchestra rehearsal.

Miss Meier said that she and the Met "had a kind of running dialogue over the years about my joining the company." "I am grateful to the New York City Opera for having released me from a commitment," she said and added, "I expect to remain a part of the happy family at the New York City Opera."

Brazilian Film Studies Tropical Love

By RICHARD EDER. Love is always dangerous but in the tropics it can be mortal. Fertility, a traditionally beneficent notion in the North, becomes a sick joke. Life proliferates and chokes; Too many mosquitoes and snakes. Turn your back on your garden for a minute, and vegetable sex has buried it under fronds and creepers.

Mostly, though, it means—uneven acting, uncertain direction and overblown writing falling a long way short of its intentions. If theclair is half-baked, there's not much use poisoning it.

Witty Films by Noyes

ELI NOYES JR. RETROSPECTIVE: CLAY, 8 minutes; IN A BOX, 6 minutes; ALPHABET, 4 minutes; BARKS, 1 minute; SANDMAN, 4 minutes; BAD DOG, 5 minutes; ROUGH, 1 minute; THE FABLE OF HE AND SHE, 11 minutes; PEANUT BUTTER AND JELLY, 11 minutes; THE DOT, 30 minutes. At the Film Forum, 15 Vandam Street.

Good things, the saying goes, come in small packages. And the small packages that are the films of Eli Noyes Jr. are crammed with wit, beauty, inventiveness and a keen sensitivity to the tunny and sadness of the human condition.

City Center to Turn 55th St. Theater Over to Dancers

By ANNA KISSELGOFF. The governing board of the City Center of Music and Drama agreed yesterday to turn over control of its 55th Street Theater for one year to a "consortium" of four dance companies. Details of the agreement are expected to be worked out in the next few days.

The action came after the City Center Joffrey Ballet and the Alvin Ailey City Center Dance Theater had criticized the management of the 55th Street house, where they are resident, and the financial terms with which they were being presented by the parent City Center organization.

DILORENZO TRIAL OPENS IN BROOKLYN

Retired Judge Is Accused of 4 Courts of Perjury

By EDITH EVANS ASBURY... The trial of Ross DiLorenzo, a retired Brooklyn Civil Court judge, on four counts of perjury charges began yesterday in State Supreme Court in Brooklyn...

The indictment alleged that Judge DiLorenzo had lied concerning the purpose of a meeting he requested and obtained with one of the witnesses who testified yesterday, Anthony Piazza, former assistant counsel to the Waterfront Commission...

In his opening statement to the jury, Steven Sawyer, an assistant to Mr. Nadjar, told the jury he would prove that Judge DiLorenzo had sought to persuade Mr. Piazza to "take it easy" on an investigation involving friends and neighbors of the judge...

The school, in turn, denied it had violated any constitutional rights and asserted that its admissions policies were "responsive to the medical needs of the community's large black and Puerto Rican population..."

A few doors north, at the corner of 10th Avenue and 23d Street, the Empire Diner has a quiet little neighbor called Epicure's Kitchen. Allowing for a bit of exaggeration, it lives up to the dictionary's definition of an epicure as "a person who enjoys and has a discriminating taste for fine foods and drinks." Drinks are out, since there's Epicure's Kitchen (★), 470 West 23d Street, 242-9285. Credit cards: None. Price range: A la carte menu for lunch with entrees $2.50 to $3.25 (vegetable and potato included); à la carte menu for dinner with entrees $4.95 to $8.50 (vegetable and potato included). Hours: Monday through Friday for lunch, noon to 3 P.M.; daily for dinner, 5:30 to 10 P.M.; closed April 12 through 15. Reservations: Advisable.

Ceylon India Inn (★★), 148 West 49th Street, 265-9522. Credit cards: American Express, Diners Club. Price range: Businessman's lunch $2.50 to $3.50; complete dinner, $5, $7 and $8.50; special $10 (minimum two persons, 4 la carte menu for lunch and dinner with entrees $3.50 to $5). The restaurants reviewed here each Friday are rated four stars to none, based on the author's reaction to cuisine, atmosphere and price in relation to comparable establishments. Roughly, one star means good, two very good, three excellent and four extraordinary.

no liquor license, and you have to bring your own wine or trot the long cross-town block to Ninth Avenue for a bottle. "Fine foods" does not mean fancy foods here—but let's stop the if's and but's. This is a cozy, clean, quite charming little restaurant (32 seats) with unusually well-prepared standards such as veal piccata ($5.75), liver with onions ($4.75) and seafood dishes running from around $5 to $6.25.

The restaurant is not family-run, but has that air about it. It is a place that could be habit-forming if it were just around the corner, which I wish it were for me.

Another nice quiet restaurant, this one in a contradictory location, is the Ceylon India Inn at 148 West 49th, deep in the heart of purland. Miss your aim about three feet to the left and you will find yourself in a topless bar instead of in the vestibule of the narrow stairway leading to the restaurant on the second floor. Once you are up the stairs, though, the dirty flicks and grind houses are all behind you, or below you, and you would not know the area had changed in the 25 years or so that the restaurant has been there.

Indian restaurants have proliferated in New York during those years, but Ceylon India's kitchen is still in the upper bracket for authenticity. The rather thin scattering of diners these days also has a kind of authenticity—Indians looking very much at home, and some literary-looking types who, on one of our recent visits, included a table of Londoners. Eavesdropping, we gathered that they were back again after having eaten at the Ceylon India on a trip two years ago, a sterling recommendation since London has the best Indian restaurant outside India—Jamshid's.

Prices on standard meals run from businessman's lunches as low as $2.50 to the chef's special dinner at $10 a person (for a minimum of two persons). There is quick service if the waiter is warned that you are getting to the theater, but we have settled for leisurely meals allowing for the Indian à la carte specialties, which take 25 minutes' preparation. As a strong recommendation among these, the Kandy Kahob, lamb in a sauce perfumed with spices, pleased us mightily.

If you like your Indian food hot, say so, and you will get it at the level of maximum tolerance. We asked the proprietor if the restaurant was open after the theater. "Sometimes," he said, "if anyone comes in."

Today, "The Misfits" (1961) and "The Goddess" (1958); tomorrow, "The Red Shoes" (1948) and the Royal Ballet's "Romeo and Juliet" (1968); Sunday, "Father of the Bride" (1950) and "Alice Adams" (1935); Monday, a Faulkner-derived program of "The Long, Hot Summer" (1957) and "Tomorrow" (1972); all at Carnegie Hall Cinema (77-2121).

At the Elgin Cinema (675-9635), today, "Woodstock" (1970) and "Yellow Submarine" (1968); tomorrow, "Animal Crackers" (1930), "The Cocoanuts" (1929) and "Monkey Business" (1931); Sunday, "Touch of Evil" (1958) and "The Third Man" (1949). Today, "Devil" (1987) at 4 P.M., presented by Columbia University's India Club at Amsterdam Avenue and 118th Street; admission $3. Monday, "The Phantom of the Opera" (1927); free at 3:30 and 7 P.M. in the Hudson Park branch library, 10 Seventh Avenue South.

Mystery Force on Moon May 'Run' Apollo Station

By BOYCE RENSBERGER

A mysterious force on the moon has been perplexing space scientists in recent months by making one of the remote-controlled scientific stations set up by Apollo astronauts behave peculiarly.

The station, which had been operating on the lunar surface without interruption since it was placed there in February 1971, went dead, then spontaneously returned to life a few weeks later, working better than ever, and then went dead again.

Engineers at the Johnson Space Center near Houston are now waiting to see whether the unknown influence acts on the station again to switch it back on.

"It's a bit of a mystery," said Charles R. Redmond, a Houston-based spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. "We have a number of people trying to figure out what's happening up there but we haven't got an answer yet."

One of 5 Stations

The station, established on the Apollo 14 mission, is one of five deployed at various sites on the moon at intervals since November 1969. Until this recent incident, all had been operating uneventfully, sending back a steady stream of scientific data on such things as moonquakes, the amount of heat flowing out of the moon's interior and the nature of particles blowing in the solar wind.

Although the stations, called ALSEPs, for Apollo Lunar Scientific Experiment Packages, were first thought to have a lifetime of one year, their atomic power supplies have proved more durable.

The mystery began in March 1975 when the Apollo 14 station's receiver failed, cutting it off from radio commands from ground controllers. Last Jan. 13 its transmitter suddenly stopped working and nothing was heard from the ALSEP until Feb. 19 when, just as suddenly, the entire station came back to life.

Operated Flawlessly

Not only did both the transmitter and receiver resume working but one of the experiments that had never operated during the heat of lunar daytime was also now operating flawlessly night and day.

Then, exactly a month later, the mysterious force shut the whole station down again.

One theory, Mr. Redmond said, is that the starts and stops are related to extreme changes in temperature. In the daytime the moon's surface is 250 degrees Fahrenheit, but after nightfall it drops to 300 degrees below zero. The ALSEP has tended to die during the

Bridge: Americans Can Hear Daily About Play in Monte Carlo

By ALAN TRUSCOTT

Only a tiny minority of American enthusiasts will be able to travel to Monte Carlo next month to support their representatives in four major international events: the Bermuda Bowl, the world team championship by zones, the Venice Trophy, a women's challenge match between British and American teams; the World Olympiad open team championship, and the World Olympiad women's team championship.

For those who stay home but wish to follow the progress of these exciting events, daily bulletins can be airmailed to them from Monte Carlo. Orders can be placed with The Bridge World, 39 West 94th Street, New York, N.Y. 10025, before April 25 at the following rates: Bermuda Bowl and Venice Trophy, $8.50; Olympiad events, $14; all events, $18.50.

First One in 1960

The first Olympiad was held in 1960 in Turin, Italy, not far from Monte Carlo, and proved to be one of the most exciting international events of all time. The United States was permitted to enter by reason of its large bridge population, an experiment that was never repeated.

Only one of the 24 American representatives will be competing again next month—Ira Rubin of Paramus, N.J. This rugged and tenacious performer suffered on the diagramed deal played in Turin: a dubious overcall by his partner left him in an untenable contract, and the opponents took full advantage of their opportunity.

Many players would open the bidding with the South hand, but Rubin, as South, chose to pass. West could not open one no-trump, since he was using the weak variety, and chose one club. North ventured one spade when the vulnerability indicated a pass, assuming that South, as a passed hand, would not take strong action. Rubin now had a difficult bid, and elected to jump to two no-trump.

This ended the bidding, and when West led a diamond, the declarer could see four sure tricks. Rather to his surprise there were no sure ones to be had.

In an attempt to establish and use his diamonds, South overtook dummy's ten with the queen and led the nine. West won with the jack, and shifted to the spade king, placing his partner with the queen, since South did not play the suit.

South resisted the temptation to duck and play West for the queen, which would have made matters even worse. He won with the ace in dummy, and played the jack. East took his queen, and led the heart ten. The queen lost, the king, and West worked out the situation correctly.

He knew that South had the ace-queen of diamonds, and he was fairly sure about the ace-queen of hearts. Therefore, South did not have the club king, suggested by his bid of no-trump.

Accordingly, West led the club ace and followed with a low club. This gave the defense four club tricks, and they also obtained two hearts, a spade and two diamonds. Down four tricks gave East-West 400 points, equivalent to a nonvulnerable game.

In the four-heart deal described yesterday, West could and should have defeated the contract by covering the queen in the position shown in the sub-diagram. He then would have made three trump tricks. The declarer could have avoided this possibility by ruffing a club in the dummy earlier in the play.

The Empire State Tournament of the Westchester Contract Bridge Association begins today at the W.Y.C.A., 515 North Street, White Plains, with the following schedule:

Love Among the Hard Hats

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT

BLOODBROTHERS. By Richard Price. 371 pages. Houghton Mifflin, $8.95.

Richard Price

At the beginning of Richard Price's "Bloodbrothers," a Co-op City resident named Tommy De Coco takes his wife and two sons to visit a New Jersey cemetery in which he has just bought a plot through the electricians' union he belongs to. ("I figure I'll be here, Marie, you'll be next to me. Then Stony right under me and Albert next to him under you over there.") and started serving drinks." The scene is maudlin, but the mawkishness is true to the characters; so the reader participates. Stony, Tommy's 18-year-old son, tries a job as a recreation assistant at Cresthaven Hospital as a way to escape joining his father's union and settling down to a predictable hard-hat life of pay raises and lunch pails.

Only an Uppercut Away

Besides, Mr. Price's ear for his characters' hard-hat speech patterns is deadly accurate. ("I'd offer a few more samples if I could find any that could be printed here.") His prose describes the action precisely without betraying the mood created by his characters' crude speech patterns.

Except on those occasions where Mr. Price gets carried away, the action is so psychologically "true" that reading about these Co-op City brawlers is like being only an uppercut away from them ("Stony got up from the bar. "Gotta go home, Chubby." Chubby (Stony's 300-pound uncle) rested his head on his folded arms. Stony walked out. After a while Chubby struggled with his feet and staggered to the john, supporting himself on the shoulders of the men sitting along the bar.")

Best of all, the form in which "Bloodbrothers" is plotted is basically comic; much of what happens in it depends on misunderstandings and cases of mistaken identity. So Mr. Price can go to a variety of extremes—of violence, brutality, sentimentality and madness—without ever finally alienating the reader's affections. We can even take the pain of Stony's eventual capitulation to his father's plans for his life, and view it against the background of the comic vitality with which Mr. Price's characters conduct their lives.

A Mawkish Truthfulness True, Mr. Price still has a tendency to get carried away every so often, by permitting the frenzied pace of his action to force him into gestures beyond the control of his art. At one point, it becomes necessary for Mr. Price to make Tommy De Coco's baby nephew die in a meaningless accident, so the author directs the baby's mother to fall asleep, roll over and suffocate it to death—and the mood is broken by the reader's incredulity. At another point, Marie De Coco, suddenly afraid of the young man she has invited up to her apartment to help her get even in a war of infidelity with Tommy, flings all her kitchen knives out of the window—and the logic of the gesture seems more appealing than its psychological truth, for Marie is simply not quite what this act makes her seem.

But elsewhere Mr. Price wins many more gambles than he loses. Tommy and the boys get together to buy Banion, the paralytic bartender, a birthday present of a new electric-powered wheelchair and a .38 caliber pistol that fits into a holster fastened underneath the wheelchair's seat. "Banion felt for the holster and replaced the gun. He sat with his elbows covering his face. . . . He wiped away his tears as Tommy and Chubby moved behind the bar

Hydrogen Extraction Methods Growing

By VICTOR K. McELHENY Extraction of hydrogen fuel from water by using heat and chemical catalysts, instead of relying exclusively on electricity, is becoming a laboratory reality, scientists from several research centers reported here yesterday.

less using both electrolysis and thermochemical breakup of water.

The proposed system would use heated sulphuric acid and water to produce sulphuric acid and water, Dr. Brecher said. He noted that the output of sulphuric acid from a three billion watt reactor would equal the entire current production of the acid in the United States.

Dr. Bowman said that the volumes of fluid that would be handled in a future hydrogen plant would be 10 to 100 times as large as those handled in existing chemical plants.

The huge scale of such an industry is not the only problem, the scientists said. The research ahead must check for unwanted "side reactions," corrosion and possible medical harmfulness as well as cost, they said.

Dr. Brecher said that only four chemical reactions were involved in the production of synthetic natural gas from coal, and yet some 20 different industrial processes had been proposed to carry out those reactions, each demanding a similar technological complexity lay ahead for any hydrogen industry.

Funding from United States Government and private sources for hydrogen research is small, Dr. Bowman said, adding, "The questions deserve a faster answer than they will get at this level of support."

Dr. Schreiner said that the total cost of seven Government-supported groups studying thermochemical hydrogen production is now about $800,000 a year. "This is small compared to the need and the potential usefulness," he observed.

Dr. Brecher said that the annual 5 percent decline in United States production of natural gas indicated much higher gas prices in the future. "We're going to regret we didn't start earlier," he said.

Udall Office Plied WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—The staff of Representative Morris K. Udall's national campaign headquarters told the police today a radio and a tape recorder had been stolen from the Udall offices near Capitol Hill. The police said that there was no sign of forcible entry.

FROGMORE, S. C.—A few years ago in a small South Carolina town where I lived, a man named Gene Kneese announced that he was going to run for the job of superintendent of schools. Although Gene was a nice fellow, he did not have any apparent qualifications for that post. But he went out knocking on doors.

Grins And Grits

By George McMillan

"I'm Gene Kneese," he said, cheerfully and confidently to whoever answered. "I've got six children and I need that school job." That was Gene's campaign and he won with it.

And it now looks possible that Jimmy Carter might make his way to the White House with just about the same political tactics that Gene used. After all, they're tried and true, and they've been developed in a region where everything depended on their success. The South has been surviving on its own rhetoric since 1800. Politics is the South's theater, the main carrier of its folklore, its most glamorous vocation, and its universal avocation.

Of these years of political combat, three rules have evolved: Never discuss issues. Be confident and act as if you've already won. Show the voters you want the job.

It used to be true in the South that any discussion of issues would lead to the one tabooed issue, to the issue of Southern life, to a discussion of race. It was imperative, therefore, that issues be avoided, sidestepped, dodged, evaded, counterfeited, disguised or converted into code language.

Instead of using issues, the Southern politician, with the help of the white primary, the disfranchisement of the blacks, and of most of the poor whites won his seat by building constellations of "friends and neighbors," as V. O. Key described them in his landmark study, "Southern Politics." That is, the skill in winning was the skill in making every voter believe he was either a friend or a neighbor.

This style of personal politics, developed through nearly two centuries of campaigning, has produced a breed of candidate willing to go to any extreme to remember your first name, shake hands by the elbow and smile—no matter what happened.

But hasn't the South changed? And isn't Jimmy Carter a symbol of the new South? The historical view helps: The South has proclaimed a "new South" at about the rate of once every decade since Henry Grady proclaimed it at the end of Reconstruction.

It is true that white Southerners are more cosmopolitan, more prosperous, less insular and defensive than they were before the 1964 civil rights laws were enacted. The black movement and its victories freed the white man, too. But the South has not yet gone through that industrialization that has so often been hailed. And its political institutions, its political life, its political style, have not yet altered fundamentally.

What has actually happened in Southern politics since blacks have been allowed to vote freely is not a political revolution.

Most often in the South today it works out that the black man votes for the white politician who will support some local black project—a child-care center, say—while the same politician will vote in the State Legislature or in Congress against almost every measure that would benefit the black community nationally. Senator Strom Thurmond will sponsor a prominent black South Carolina lawyer for the Federal bench and at the same time vote against every social welfare program that goes to the Senate.

Throughout the South, such concessions are being made by white politicians who are content to make them as long as they can remain the brokers of actual political power.

The political style of Southern politics, of campaigning, has not changed that much. It is still a style in which issues are not discussed in the campaign. It is still a style in which the candidate spends most of his time and energy trying to convince the voters that he is a Good Ol' Boy. It is still a style that reduces the constituency to friends and neighbors who cannot, after their votes are counted, argue that the candidate for whom they used their franchise stands for anything more specific than, say, God.

It was inevitable that some Southern politician would do what Carter is doing today, try the Southern style of politics on the national electorate.

It seems that Carter has found the exact moment when the national electorate is ready for the Southern style, when many of us prefer that the energy crisis, détente, the economy, busing, assassination conspiracies and Watergate be left undiscussed.

Carter is not the man to remind us of these perplexing and often painful problems, certainly not as long as his smile works.

The Burden on Carter

By Tom Wicker

The Wisconsin and New York primaries seem to have sent Jimmy Carter of Georgia a little further along the road to the Democratic Presidential nomination. But his remarks on the "ethnic purity" of neighborhoods may prove more important than either primary; and although he has apologized for those remarks, they still could destroy his carefully built but exceedingly fragile political position.

For one thing, the apology clearly followed vigorous protests from Mr. Carter's black and some other supporters, raising the question whether it represented sincere repentance or a quick retreat under pressure. That, in turn, lends substance to charges that it is hard to know what Mr. Carter really believes, and what he may say only for campaign purposes.

More importantly, the episode threatens not just the substantial black support that Mr. Carter has been getting and which will be vital to him in primaries to come; it threatens Mr. Carter's basic acceptability as a possible Democratic Presidential nominee.

That is because Jimmy Carter is a white man from Georgia who made his career in the racially charged politics of the South. To appeal nationally, he needed to show that he could rise above racial politics (not necessarily that he had never, even in Georgia, been tainted by it).

self; he said he would support that kind of a policy.

There is a distinction here: Mr. Carter is saying he would not support a policy that allowed a white neighborhood to keep out a black family, but apparently he also would not support, for example, putting low-rent housing in high-rent districts. Nor would he "deliberately . . . try to break down an ethnically oriented community."

No doubt many whites feel the same way—that was roughly the Nixon Administration position—but there are good reasons why the distinction is not fitting for a candidate who aspires to lead all the people. As a Southerner surely knows, the full power of the Federal Government was needed to break down segregation in the South, and it will take no less to break it down where it exists in the North.

For one specific example, as industry continues to move to the rim of the city, an active Federal housing policy will be needed to prevent blacks and low-income whites from being shut out of the suburbs and left behind in the ghetto and decaying white neighborhoods. For another, if Mr. Carter opposes pupil busing, as he says he does, and if he will not support Federal efforts to integrate neighborhoods, the certain result will be to legitimate many all-white and all-black "neighborhood schools."

The fear of many black leaders is that Mr. Carter, astute as he has shown himself to be, knows all that and was, in fact, sending out a deliberate signal to the white suburbs and to white city neighborhoods, that feel threatened by integration. But his responses to reporters seemed more nearly confused and puzzled, as if he might have blundered into statements whose import he did not grasp.

Even if the latter interpretation is the correct one, Mr. Carter's use of such loaded phrases as "ethnic purity" and "invasion" and "alien groups" rather ominously suggests a mistake of politics. Either way, the burden is on Jimmy Carter—not just to "apologize," not just to retreat, but to make it clear where he really stands, what he really believes.

IN THE NATION

For that necessary demonstration that he had shed regional limitations, nothing was more important than for Mr. Carter to win the support of black voters and black leaders. Until this week, he had done that notably, raising the intriguing political possibility of a Southern candidate who could "hold the South" and win elsewhere, too.

Now Mr. Carter may have to start all over again in demonstrating that kind of national acceptability. Already, his most prominent black supporter, Representative Andrew Young of Georgia, has called the "ethnic purity" remark a "disaster for the campaign." If Mr. Young and other black leaders defect, not just black but many white voters surely will lose their confidence that Jimmy Carter really does transcend his regional environment.

In the remarks that precipitated this crisis, Mr. Carter appeared to be trying to make a subtle distinction between: a Federal policy that would use the power of the Government to force "the intrusion of alien groups into a neighborhood, simply to establish that intrusion"; he said he would oppose such a policy.

a Federal policy that would support the right of a family to move into any neighborhood it chose for

Dismay in India

By X

NEW DELHI—Many Indians supported Prime Minister Indira Gandhi when she declared a state of national emergency last June and sent tens of thousands of her critics to prison. They evidently felt that her conviction earlier by the Allahabad High Court on charges of electoral corruption and the consequent loss of her parliamentary seat for six years would deprive India of her strong leadership and weaken the democratic fabric.

Explaining her drastic response to plans by the non-Communist opposition parties to organize a national campaign to force her to resign, Mrs. Gandhi said in early July: "My intention is not to destroy but strengthen democracy. Let it not be said that Jawaharlal Nehru's daughter will ever think of undoing what her great father strove for all his life."

abridge or entirely remove Article 226 of the Indian Constitution, depriving state high courts and the New Delhi Supreme Court of the power to entertain writ petitions from aggrieved citizens. A former Supreme Court judge said: "This would deliver the final fatal blow at our judicial system and make the executive a law unto itself."

The nation's four news agencies have been nationalized, and attempts are being made to get nonconformist editors and journalists fired by their publishers. Mrs. Gandhi's secret intelligence service has infiltrated all major newspapers in the nation with the help of Establishment journalists. In New Delhi, at least 20 newspapers are known to be working for intelligence.

Today, as one senior Government official ruefully admitted, there is not even the pretense of maintaining the barrier between the civil services and the ruling party. Key decisions concerning the administration are taken by party bosses, senior civil servants are often answerable to petty party functionaries, and the Government machinery is being brazenly used for purely party purposes.

For instance, Government planes are being placed at the disposal of party men, while the Government-owned railways and passenger buses are being commandeered to collect crowds for party rallies, especially those addressed by Mrs. Gandhi.

The Congress Party chairman, Dev Kant Borooah, said at a rally: "Those who are not committed to the policies of our beloved leader Prime Minister Indira Gandhi have no place in our body politic." Young hoodlums claiming to be members of the youth wing of the Congress Party—broke up a meeting of Calcutta students called to pray for the health of Jaya Prakash Narayan, the ailing opposition leader. Many had to be hospitalized.

Indians say that under the authoritarian rule of Mrs. Gandhi their nation has witnessed a growing betrayal of the democratic and humanistic principles of Mohandas K. Gandhi and Jawaharlal Nehru. With the respected Acharya Bhawe, the last surviving colleague of Gandhi, effectively censored (his critical speeches have been blacked out in the press) and the pacifist Narayan depending on a kidney machine for his very survival, there is little to prevent Mrs. Gandhi from completing her work of senseless destruction.

But as the emergency drags on many of Mrs. Gandhi's erstwhile supporters and admirers seem to be skeptical of her claim that "this bitter medicine is necessary to cure the patient of his serious illness."

For what is happening in India is the gradual erosion of all the political, moral and ethical values on which Mohandas K. Gandhi, Jawaharlal Nehru and other founding fathers of independence built the new nation.

"The damage done in the last nine months is almost irreparable," said a professor at Delhi University. "It is not a mere question of an emergency, having been declared and a large number of people arrested. These could be undone by a process of reconciliation. But the very foundation of democracy is being ruthlessly destroyed."

Mrs. Gandhi, her disillusioned admirers say, is resorting to the meanest political tricks to suppress the last vestiges of democracy. They are particularly dismayed by the manner in which the opposition-led governments in the states of Tamil Nadu and Gujarat were toppled.

The Tamil Nadu administration was dismissed on Jan. 31 on the ground that it was planning a secessionist movement against the Government. Even ruling Congress Party Members of Parliament privately admit that there is not a shred of evidence to support this charge.

What took place subsequently in Gujarat was even more immoral. As one former Gujarat Cabinet minister told me, "Threats, blackmail and bribes were used to cause defections from the state ruling party."

The judiciary has been systematically attacked. The latest move is to

The growing food problem. What we're doing about it:

Much of the world lives on corn, soybeans and rice.

Trouble is, there just isn't enough to go around.

What can we do? Monsanto has many ways to help produce more food per acre and more food per harvest. One way is called Lasso® herbicide, a weed control product that can help increase corn and soybean yields.

In response to the needs of rice-producing nations, we have developed Machete® herbicide for sale outside the United States. It works to increase the production of rice by reducing weed competition.

Naturally, there are many customers for products like these.

And because there are, it not only means greater crop yields, but more manufacturing plants that we're building all over the world to meet this growing need. On Lasso alone, we're working to increase world-wide production by 50%.

Because we want the world to reap the benefits of products that come from

We played the Masters so well, they gave us an Emmy.

That's what CBS Sports won last year: the most prestigious award in television for excellence in covering the most prestigious event in sports.

And this year at the Masters, our reporting will be even more extensive.

We'll be fielding an army almost as large as Arnie's: Over a hundred experts and technicians. Plus seven veteran sportscasters. And 28 cameras to give you live, slow-motion, and stop-action viewing. All coordinated by walkie-talkie observers. And all calculated to make sure you keep your eye on the ball.

That's how our sportscasting has grown in the 21 years that we've brought you the Masters.

It's the kind of in-depth reporting that CBS Sports viewers have come to expect. And they've been getting it in all of the sports events we've covered:

Jimmy Connors vs. Rod Laver in the first televised challenge match in tennis history. (Not to mention two full weekends of the U. S. Open Tennis Championships from Forest Hills.)

The Golden State Warriors' stunning upset of the Washington Bullets in the NBA Finals.

The tragic match race between Foolish Plea and Ruffian.

The heart-stopping action of the entire NFL season, plus the play-offs, and Super Bowl X.

Live coverage of Muhammad Ali's title defense against the luckless Jean Pierre Coopman.

And, most recently, the Long Beach Grand Prix—the first Formula One race ever run through streets of an American city.

When it comes to Pro sports, you get a lot more than the score at CBS. Because we're Pro's, too.

The hall breaks with recent tradition in one important aspect of interior design—nothing inside is red. The seats will be gold, the walls and ceiling antique white, a design decision that can only be hailed as a welcome change. And an off-white room with gold details is really much more in the classical tradition than an overstuffed red one.

E. Alice Austen Photographed Earlier Gracious Days of S.I.

By HILTON KRAMER... The history of photography has harbored many strange and poignant careers, but few have been stranger—and none more poignant—than the one honored last night in the dedication of a public school in Graniteville, S.I.

Self-portrait, 1888

E. Alice Austen, the photographer for whom Public School 60 has now been officially named by Community School Board 31, was born into a prosperous Staten Island family in 1866. She died a pauper in 1945, and was buried in an unmarked grave in the Moravian Cemetery at New Dorp, in her native borough. Only at the end of her long life did she begin to win recognition for her photographic achievements.

In the heyday of her career, in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, she produced thousands of pictures, estimates vary from 3,500 to 7,000, for they have never been completely counted or catalogued—mainly of the upper-class fashionable life in which she participated, but also of working-class life on the Lower East Side and of some of the historical events of her day.

Gift From Audio Pioneer... The $4 million for the basic reconstruction will come from Avery Fisher's gift of $3 to $10-million to the Philharmonic, whose hall was re-named for the high-fidelity pioneer and manufacturer in 1973. An additional $1 million would be raised elsewhere.

Book Due in Fall... These photographs, which have been in the possession of the Staten Island Historical Society since 1945 and exist mainly in the form of the photographer's original glass-plate negatives, have lately been rediscovered and acclaimed.

They were the subject of a 30-minute film, "Alice's World," narrated by Helen Hayes and shown on WNET/Channel 13 on Christmas Day, 1975, and are also the subject of a new book, "Alice's World: The Life and Photography of an American Original: Alice Austen, 1866-1945," written by Ann Novotny, which will be published by Chatham Press next fall.

They are indeed photographs that take us into a lost world—a world where tennis is being played for the first time in America, where horse-drawn carriages co-exist with the first motorcars and where Staten Island is the chic summer resort of the rich.

To judge by some of the self-portraits she has left us—she was fond of using delayed-action mechanisms, and often placed

The Major Events of the Day

International... Prime Minister James Callaghan of Britain last night announced his Cabinet. He named Anthony Crosland Foreign Secretary and Michael Foot Lord President of the Council. The bill now goes to the House, which has a companion measure under consideration. Both bills, however, face a veto by President Ford. [1:7.] The Internal Revenue Service announced its decision to issue a ruling that is expected to cost American oil companies with overseas operations more than $100 million in additional taxes this year and could cost them $1 billion or more a year in the future. A ruling seeking the exact reverse had been sought by the Mobil Oil Corporation with the support of most or all of the other companies. [1:8.] In a rare public response to criticism of the Supreme Court and its rulings, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger contended at a news conference that the so-called Burger Court's record on protecting individual rights was at least as good as the record of any earlier Court. The Chief Justice also said that there had been "no significant change" in the Court's attitude toward the rights of criminal defendants "in either four years or eight years or 12 years." [1:2.] Metropolitan... The State Court of Appeals ruled unanimously that "reverse discrimination"—the practice of giving special treatment in education and employment to minority group members—was constitutional "in proper circumstances." The court's first ruling in one of the most controversial and emotional areas of contemporary law was made in response to a lawsuit brought against the Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn, which the court said had given preferment to minority applicants who were less qualified than white students. [1:3.] The State Insurance Department has published a shopper's guide that shows that rates for homeowners and tenants insurance in New York State can vary as much as 80 percent for the same coverage. The guide lists the rates charged as of Oct. 31, 1975, by the 20 companies selling the greatest amount of homeowners insurance in the state. A spokesman for the Insurance Department said that a major reason for publishing the guide was "to encourage the company with the low rates, and to help the public seek that company out." [1:5-6.]

A School on S.I. Named to Honor Native Daughter

Public School-60 on Staten Island became the Alice Austen School last night as parents, pupils, teachers and others gathered for a dedication ceremony in tribute to a photographer of the city's yesteryear. A selection of Miss Austen's pictures, including two self-portraits, were presented at the ceremonies in the auditorium of the school at 85 Merrill Avenue, in the Graniteville section. The 850-pupil school opened on Dec. 9, 1974, and serves Graniteville and New Springville. "It's really a tremendous tribute, not only to the cause of women's recognition, but also a tremendous thing for the photography profession," said John W. Russell Jr., chairman of Community School Board 31, which had approved the school's new designation in a resolution. "Of course," he added, "the main reason for the school being named for Alice Austen is the interest she took in Staten Island and the vital part she played in its history." The search for the school's name took nearly a year and involved suggestions from pupils and community residents. Their submissions ranged from Eleanor Roosevelt to a city policeman from Staten Island who was killed in the line of duty. Angela O'Dowd, the principal, said many people in the community had favored a woman's name, the teaching staff had wanted to cite someone who would be a model for the children and the school board had wanted a Staten Islander. "Although many names were suggested, we couldn't get a name that unified us until we came upon Alice Austen's," Miss O'Dowd said. "We believe she's just coming into her own, and that one day she will have national recognition."

8 G.O.P. Assemblymen Call for Reid's Dismissal

By LINDA GREENHOUSE
Special to The New York Times

ALBANY, April 8—Eight upstate Republican Assemblymen called today for the dismissal of Ogden R. Reid, the Commissioner of Environmental Conservation, whom they accused of being such a bad administrator that he was "rapidly bringing the department into a state of chaos."

The Assemblymen, some of whom described themselves as "environmentalists," said that Mr. Reid's slowness in issuing some required regulations had frustrated the intent of recent environmental legislation and that it was the department's fault that delays in processing applications could lead to a loss of Federal funds.

The group, headed by Assemblyman Andrew W. Ryan of Plattsburgh, said Mr. Reid bore responsibility for "functional paralysis" and low morale in his department, including the resignations yesterday of two of his top aides, Paul Elston and Carol Ash. Mr. Elston was hired yesterday as a $43,000-a-year deputy budget director in the Governor's office.

Mr. Reid later offered a spirited defense of his administration. He said the top-level resignations reflected not poor leadership but an "administrative overhaul" that would result in a more efficient attack by his department on major environmental problems.

The Commissioner said that most of the backlog on permits would be cleared up by tomorrow. He acknowledged that the Assemblymen were correct in charging that his delay in issuing regulations under the Mined Land Reclamation Act had made all mining and quarry operations in the state technically illegal, but said the situation would soon be corrected. "I welcome a constructive, factual dialogue," Mr. Reid said. But he added that he "could not help noticing" that all the Assemblymen calling for his dismissal were Republicans and that all had received among the lowest possible ratings from the Environmental Planning Lobby.

A senior member of the upstate Republican delegation, Assemblyman Glenn H. Harris of Canada Lake, the minority whip, did not join in his colleagues' statement. In a separate interview, Mr. Harris said that his relations with Mr. Reid had been favorable and that Governor Carey should probably be blamed for any problems the Commissioner had.

Stanley Stangor, the Assembly Speaker, as well as eight members of the Assembly Environmental Conservation Committee, denounced the Republican statement as "a blatant, obvious political maneuver."

In fact, Mr. Reid's relationship with Governor Carey has often been strained. The departure of his two top aides echoed the rapid turnover in personnel from which Mr. Reid's gubernatorial campaign suffered two years ago.

One Carey aide referred to the Budget Division's having "rescued" Mr. Elston by giving him a job after he had a falling out with Mr. Reid. Mr. Elston, a 31-year-old former Lindsay administration aide, was not available for comment today. A spokesman for Mr. Carey said the Governor "would not dignify" the statement by the eight upstate Republicans with a response.

The Simulate La Guardia Bombing

A telephone at Police Headquarters with the number 344 is being manned around the clock to receive information on the blast.

"We welcome any calls regardless of how irrelevant people may think they are," said Louis C. Cottell, the chief of detectives, who is personally heading the investigation.

At the scene of the explosion yesterday—the department's shooting range at Rodman Neck near City Island in the Bronx—Chief Cottell and a dozen or so other detectives, working on the case were in a sober mood.

The blast came forward. A telephone at Police Headquarters with the number 344 is being manned around the clock to receive information on the blast.

Are there any leads at all, a reporter asked Joan Carey, the chief of investigations in the office of the District Attorney in Queens, which contains La Guardia. "Not at this time," she said.

Chief Cottell said that he haven't got any theories as he walked toward a sandbag bunker to await the blast.

"We're trying to develop some theories," he said.

Later, Chief Cottell said he was being "very conservative" in what he said at the blast site and thought the others were, too.

Lieut. Kenneth W. O'Neill, the chief of the bomb section, was asked if the investigators were any further ahead than in the early days of the investigation.

"We have an open mind," he replied.

Are there any leads at all, a reporter asked Joan Carey, the chief of investigations in the office of the District Attorney in Queens, which contains La Guardia.

Chief Cottell said that more than 2,000 people had been interviewed in the bombing investigation by more than 75 city detectives between 150 and 200 agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Despite extensive laboratory testing, the police have yet to determine with certainty the size of the bomb—although it has been estimated to have had the force of between 15 and 25 sticks of dynamite—or its composition, and they hoped to develop clues in the explosion yesterday. The investigation was still in progress.

For the city—whose fiscal difficulties resulted in 20 teachers being cut from the budget of the School for the Deaf, the principal—the $4 million worth of improvement to the same way will have been completed, he added.

Sue Livingston, a teacher at the School for the Deaf, translating Mayor Beame's remarks into sign language during dedication of a new wing for the school yesterday.

The new wing will be dedicated on Monday. It will provide additional space for students and staff.

'Dead' L.I. Man and Wife Arrested in Insurance Fraud

A husband and wife from Long Island were arrested for insurance fraud. They were accused of filing a claim for a death that had not occurred.

The couple, George and Rose Marie Baker, were arrested last Tuesday. They were accused of filing a claim for a death that had not occurred.

PLANE DOWN IN ARTHUR KILL: A Cessna private plane, en route from the Midwest to Teterboro Airport, ran short of fuel, according to the pilot, and fell into the Arthur Kill off Staten Island. The pilot and one passenger swam ashore and were treated and released from a hospital.

Supersedes Local School Board in Dispute

A statewide school policy, mandated by the central Board of Education after last fall's teachers strike, calls for a 45-minute reduction in pupil instructional time twice a week. This policy also provides for a reduction in the preparation or free time given to teachers.

The district board, asserted that the Chancellor's action had brought turmoil to a district that was trying to carry out its educational responsibilities to its pupils. Mr. Anker's supersession in District 3, which does not affect the local board's authority in other school matters, came after district authorities on Thursday ordered the principals to return to full school days.

Swedish Monarch Helps Swedesboro to Celebrate

The 29-year-old monarch's one-hour appearance created the most excitement here since his grandfather visited in 1938.

Carl XVI Gustaf, King of Sweden, in Swedesboro, N.J., yesterday. The King arrived from Philadelphia with his entourage and was greeted by Governor Byrne and local dignitaries.

Carl XVI Gustaf, King of Sweden, in Swedesboro, N.J., yesterday.

The King arrived from Philadelphia with his entourage and was greeted by Governor Byrne and local dignitaries. While it had not yet begun to rain, the sky was leaden and a chilling east wind promised a downpour any minute.

The band from Kingsway Regional High School struck up the Swedish National Anthem and the Rev. Parker F. Auten, rector of Trinity Church, led the King and the Governor inside for a brief ceremony.

The Governor made a short speech, paying tribute to the early Swedish settlers. Mr. Auten showed the king some of the fixtures of the church that date to when it was called Old Swedes Church, and the king was presented with a few gifts from New Jersey's Swedish-extraction business and social community.

By this time the rain had begun to fall and the crowd huddled outside began getting wetter and colder. At the end of the brief ceremonies inside, the King and the Governor were escorted outside to an old church cemetery where a Swedish choral group presented Carl with flowers. He and the Governor shared an umbrella while they walked across the soggy ground.

After the cemetery ceremony, the King walked to the front of the church, where he presided over the unveiling of a granite stone marking his visit. By this time, the rain was coming down hard. The King smiled. "I'm sorry about the weather," he said. "But I'm very happy to be here nevertheless."

"Wonderful!"

"Rich with biography, memoir, bibliography and oral history."

"A highly readable and loving portrayal... It is rare to find a book that so vividly describes the religious, historical, economic, political and social life of the common woman—or man, for that matter."

"It's all fascinating and instructive... There's no question that we've needed a book on the subject for a long time... a social, historical and biographical study."

Notes on People Pulitzer Prize Aide Will Retire in June

After 22 years of inside information about who the Pulitzer Prizewinners will be, John Hohenberg will retire as administrator of the prizes at Columbia University on June 30.

John Hohenberg

"I'll have to go back to wondering who's going to win, but it will be good to get back to teaching a full load," Professor Hohenberg said yesterday.

Rutgers University announced yesterday that on July 1 Jewel Plummer Cobb will become dean of Douglass College, the sixth in the 58-year history of the women's school.

Lynda Bird Johnson Robb, replacing Julie Nixon Eisenhower, was the speaker at the Mississippi Economic Council in Jackson yesterday.

Norman Mailer has won $25,000 damages, the full amount sought, in his Manhattan State Supreme Court suit against Photoplay magazine for printing an excerpt from his book on Marilyn Monroe.

After surgery on March 17, Henry Fonda is having a slow recovery, according to a family spokesman.

year-old actor was to have left Cedars of Lebanon Hospital in Los Angeles before this, but no release date is scheduled.

Mayor Beame and New York's Secretary of State, Mario Cuomo, representing Governor Carey, paid personal and official tribute to Rabbi Harold H. Gordon last night at the New York Hilton Hotel.

A "flying chaplain" of World War II, Rabbi Gordon traveled about 250,000 miles with the North Atlantic division of the Air Transport Command.

Yesterday was the 83d birthday of Mary Pickford, who was recently awarded a special motion picture Oscar.

In Beverly Hills, Matty Kemp, managing director of Miss Pickford's company, promised to pass along the message at a buffet dinner at Pickford's last night for about 20 guests.

Judge Pagnucco, who is said to have invested a good portion of his life savings in the stocks, did not learn of the matter until the now-defunct brokerage firm of R. L. Whitney Inc. went into receivership.

SINGER CHARGED IN DEATH OF SKIER

Manslaughter Count Filed Against Miss Longet in Colorado Shooting

By GRACE LICHTENSTEIN

ASPEN, Colo., April 8 — Claudine Longet, a French singer and actress, was charged yesterday with manslaughter in the shooting death of Vladimir Sabich, twice the world professional ski racing champion.

A large crowd gathered outside the red brick Victorian Pitkin County Courthouse in the District Attorney, Frank Tucker, told reporters that he had considered charging Miss Longet with negligent homicide, a misdemeanor.

Both Miss Longet and Mr. Sabich were well known in Aspen, a lively resort and cultural center where celebrities ordinarily mix easily with other residents and the thousands of tourists who come here each year.

The 31-year-old Mr. Sabich, who was born in California, was one of the most popular, flamboyant figures on the professional ski tour.

A 49-year-old former stockbroker was accused yesterday of stealing more than $32,000 in stocks from Louis A. Pagnucco, a retired family court judge.

Announcing the indictment of Donald Soule, of Fort Lee, N.J., Robert M. Morgenthau, the Manhattan District Attorney, charged that Mr. Soule had sold $11,800 shares of stock by forging the judge's name on checks and keeping the proceeds.

3 Hughes Aides Quizzed About Customs Matters

By ROBERT M. SMITH

WASHINGTON, April 8 — Acting State Department officials here informed, but saw no reason to make any official representations to the Mexican Government.

Throughout the day, the three men were kept in a second-floor office in the police headquarters in Acapulco, accompanied occasionally by Mr. Morrow and by at least two armed agents of Mexico's Federal Judicial Police.

The three aides to Mr. Hughes stayed on in Acapulco, after the ailing billionaire was flown out last Monday. He died during the flight to Houston, where he was to receive medical treatment.

Agents of Mexico's Federal Judicial Police have also entered and searched the penthouse suite at the Acapulco Princess Hotel, where Mr. Hughes and at least a dozen aides had lived in seclusion since they moved there from the Bahamas last Feb. 11.

Both Miss Longet and Mr. Sabich were well known in Aspen, a lively resort and cultural center where celebrities ordinarily mix easily with other residents and the thousands of tourists who come here each year.

They were reported to be having domestic difficulties at the time of Mr. Sabich's death. Mr. Weedman said the "domestic discord was nothing more or less than that caused between two people who are deeply in love" and had "nothing to do with the accident."

However, Mr. Tucker said that evidence of discord "would come out" at the trial. He also said he expected to subpoena Noelle Williams, Miss Longet's 12-year-old daughter, who reportedly was the only other person in the house at the time of the shooting.

The 31-year-old Mr. Sabich, who was born in California, was one of the most popular, flamboyant figures on the professional ski tour.

N.L.R.B. Reverses A Ruling on Editor's In Newspaper

Special to The New York Times

MADISON, Wis., April 8 — The National Labor Relations Board, reversing a full administrative judge's decision that newspapers bargaining with a union institute codes of ethics prohibit their employees accepting so-called "kickbacks" to events or other gifts, ruled that such a code is not a labor law violation.

The board held that the National Labor Relations Act prohibits a code of ethics consulting Madison, Wis., the Newspaper Guild. The ruling, scheduled to be issued tomorrow, was published in the Capital Times.

The decision reverses part of a ruling by Sherman, an administrative judge who decided 15 months ago that the National Labor Relations Act prohibits a code of ethics consulting Madison, Wis., the Newspaper Guild.

E.P.A., With Billions in Budget, Is Short of Cash for Sewer Aid

By GLADWIN HILL

LOS ANGELES, April 8 — The Environmental Protection Agency acknowledged today that, although it has billions of dollars to spend, it is short of cash for the moment.

As a result, countless communities across the country may have to wait a few weeks for money the Federal Government owes them.

The E.P.A. was authorized by the legislation to "obligate" that amount in grants to cover 75 percent of the cost of municipal projects. But actual money to disburse—called "liquidating authority"—depended on periodic appropriations by Congress.

Take it from Ed McMahon:

- Better hurry. Buy a 1976 Pacer now at any AMC Dealer, and we'll include factory installed air conditioning free. This offer good for limited time only.
- Pacer is the first wide small car (even wider than Granada, Nova and Volare).
- Pacer's width means outstanding interior roominess and seating comfort.
- Pacer's wide stance means an exceptionally smooth and stable ride.
- And Pacer is backed by the wide coverage of AMC's exclusive BUYER PROTECTION PLAN*.
- It all adds up to one terrific value. Yet the price of this Pacer, including free air conditioning, is only ...

Aaron's 2 Hits Help Beat Yanks, 5-0

By MURRAY CHASS
Special to The New York Times

MILWAUKEE, April 8—The Yankees unveiled their new offense today—it was invisible. The Milwaukee Brewers showed off their old offense—Henry Aaron—and his very visible offense produced a 5-0 victory on opening day of baseball, 1976. The Yankees, who ended summer in Florida yesterday and began winter in Milwaukee today, collected only four singles off Jim Slaton. Meanwhile, Aaron, the 42-year-old youngster, rapped Catfish Hunter, the birthday boy, for two hits and drove in three runs.

"At least I lived till I was 30," Hunter said when someone wished him a happy birthday. "I still feel I'm younger than that. When I first came up to the majors, I thought a 30-year-old player was over the hill."

Let someone get the idea that the Yankees' millionaire might be over the hill, it should be recalled that Catfish, when he was only 29, lost his first three starts last April. He didn't win until his fifth start on April 37, then proceeded to win 23 games in all.

Let someone get the idea that Aaron is over the hill, it should be noted that the Brewers designated bitter batsman today as if he were half his age. Aaron, who last season drove in only 60 runs with a .234 average, singled home two runs in the first inning and singled in another in the second.

It was a fine beginning to the end of the home run king's 23-year career. This was the last opener he expects to play. When the next opener arrives, he will be an executive in the Brewers' front office.

Not in Control
"Yes, sir," he said, "this is it. This is the last one. Unless someone's a big enough fool to give me the same contract I had the last two years."

Aaron's contract provides him with $240,000 this year, the same amount he earned last year. He won't earn it this year by adding significantly to his 745 home runs, but he could improve markedly over his run-batted-in total of 1975.

"I feel better than I did last year," he said. "I'm more relaxed. There's no pressure this year. I just want to meet the ball. I don't know."

The Mets open their season today at Shea Stadium against the Expos. Details, Page 50.

If I can hit 20 home runs this year or even 15 [he hit 12 last year], I'll be happy if I wind up between 15 and 20, if I can get that many."

The setting was perfect for an Aaron home run the first time he came to bat. Hunter, having uncharacteristic difficulty with his control, had loaded the bases on Don Money's double and two walks.

Only an hour earlier, Aaron had recalled how tough Hunter had been on him last season. He went hitless in seven times at bat in two games against Catfish.

"Cat amazes me," he said. "He doesn't throw hard, but he has so many tricks he does with his slider. He's the kind of guy where you go up to the plate and he looks good to bit and then the next morning you wake up and you're oh-for-four."

On this 44-degree afternoon, Hunter went to a 3-2 count to Aaron (one of six batters he did that to in the first inning) before Henry lined a single to left for two runs. Another run scored on Bill Sharp's grounder that Jim Mason booted and the Brewers had a 3-0 lead which, in the context of the Yankee attack, was insurmountable.

Sore Arms Cited
Darrell Porter doubled in another run in the second inning, then scored on Aaron's second single. Hunter retired the Brewers in order the next three innings and allowed only two more hits the rest of his seven innings of work. Perhaps spring training ended two innings too early for Catfish.

Billy Martin had another suggestion. The County Stadium mound, the Yankee manager said, is constructed incorrectly. It is too flat and doesn't slope enough, he said.

"It's like the pitchers are throwing uphill," Martin explained. "I'm going to ask the umpires to measure it. If they don't change it, I'm going to ask that my pitchers be allowed to warm up on the mound before the game to get used to it."

Hunter, who really wasn't looking for excuses, agreed that the mound is too flat even flatter than last year he said.

"That's where George Medich hurt his arm last year," the right-hander said. "The whole staff had sore arms. We complained, but they didn't do anything about it. I couldn't get on top of the ball. I pushed it."

Slaton, who helped Alex Grammas win his first game as Milwaukee manager, acknowledged that the mound might be a little low, "but I think it's a pretty good mound."

At least it was good for

Jets Pick Another Quarterback From Alabama in N.F.L. Draft

Giants Select Archer, a Colorado Defensive End

By GERALD ESKENAZI

From the balcony overlooking the ballroom where the National Football League staged its college draft yesterday, a roar—the type of roar Joe Namath used to hear—went up when the Jets announced they had taken a quarterback out of Alabama named Richard Todd.

The last time the New Yorkers selected a quarterback as their first draft choice it was 1965—and the player was Namath, of Alabama.

Shortly after the Jets made their choice at the Hotel Roosevelt, the Giants—given leverage on Wednesday night by the signing Larry Csonka—chose a defensive end from Colorado, Troy Archer, as their first pick.

Insiders know Archer, but perhaps the average fan doesn't. He never made an all-America team and his name wasn't among the 330 college players in the potential draft list the league drew up.

Leroy Selmon of Oklahoma after he was drafted for Tampa Bay team.

New Tampa Club Takes Leroy Selmon First

By WILLIAM N. WALLACE

Leroy Selmon, the defensive lineman from Oklahoma, was predictably the first player selected in the National Football League draft of college athletes yesterday. The Tampa Bay Buccaneers, the expansion franchise putting together a team for its first season next fall, selected Selmon, a 260-pound performer who was described by their coach, John McKay, as "the best available athlete in the draft."

That common description had more to it, McKay, by taking Selmon, was building his defense around a lineman who will be expected to play at least a decade for Tampa Bay at a level of excellence.

The N.F.L., conscious of its position as a leader in show business, had directed Selmon to fly here yesterday, anticipating his role as the No. 1 choice, for a news conference.

Selmon was quiet, poised and humble. He said, "I'm

Floyd's 65 Leads Masters

By JOHN S. RADOSTA
Special to The New York Times

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 8—Ray Floyd is the expert witness on misapprehension and the "little" No. 5 wood. He says his nights as a playboy were fun, but not exactly good preparation for the winning of golf tournaments. Family responsibility and the newly acquired 5-wood, on the other hand, do help his game.

The lofty wood, especially, explained how Floyd, who has "a good attitude now," shot a sparkling 65 today and led the opening round of the 40th Masters. That was one stroke above the course record for the Augusta National Golf Club, shared by four players.

Floyd's 65 was one of many low scores made feasible by today's conditions—a soft overcast, no wind to speak of, slightly slow greens, and Bermuda grass that held up the ball nice and perky on the fairways.

The 65, seven under par for this flawlessly prepared golf course, put him two strokes ahead of the defending champion, Jack Nicklaus, who carded an eagle and two birdies on the back nine and finished with 67.

Andy North, a reformed basketball player who has been on the pro tour since 1973 without winning any tournaments, had his dream come true. He had dreamed of shooting 66 in his first appearance in the Masters and, with the help of a putter he bought for $2 in a junk shop years ago, he did precisely that today.

Larry Ziegler, the hockey buff who occasionally fills in as a stick boy for his beloved St. Louis Blues, shot 67 and tied Nicklaus for third place.

Lou Graham, the United States Open champion, shot 68—"a good score but not good golf," Graham, who affects the style of a country

Islanders Don Think Caps

By ROBIN HERMAN
Special to The New York Times

VANCOUVER, British Columbia, April 8—Dave Lewis creased his forehead and then scribbled a sentence on a yellow legal pad. The New York Islander defenseman paused, stared blankly, and then wrote another line.

Ten hours before game time, Lewis was trying to outthink the Vancouver Canucks. It was his second essay on Vancouver this week. Coach Al Arbour had required the homework from all the Islanders.

"Before, we had to do a breakdown on each individual," said Lewis. "Now we're supposed to say what the team can do or what we should change for tonight based on the first game."

The Islanders won the opening game of their two-of-three-game playoff series with Vancouver Tuesday night in Nassau Coliseum. Since that 5-3 victory, Arbour had led the team through four talk sessions on the Canucks—three meetings today.

"It forces you to think hockey," said Glenn Resch, the goalie. "It's just a matter of tradition. In football they've always had the long preparation, the chalk talks. But hockey never had it. People think, 'Ah, there's nothing to it,' but I agree with Al, it's good for us."

In their three seasons under Arbour, the Islander

Hubert Goes for the Green Coat

AUGUSTA, Ga., April 8—When he was 14 years old, Hubert Green, the mannerly son of a Birmingham, Ala., physician, visited the Augusta National Golf Club for the first time and watched golfers practice for the Masters that year. He and a few other teen-agers had been flown over in the private plane of Hall Thompson, an Alabama millionaire.

"He had a 10-seater," Hubert Green recalls.

And last week, when Hubert Green began practicing for the Masters, he also arrived in Hall Thompson's plane.

Sports of The Times
"He's got," Hubert says, "a 15-seater now."

That indeed is progress, but Hubert Green, as skinny as a 2-iron and much more dependable, has made even more progress. As he strode toward the first tee today in his green shirt and plaid slacks, the 29-year-old touring pro was the leading money-winner this year with $130,006, including $118,000 for winning his last three tournaments—the Doral-Eastern open by six strokes, the Jacksonville open by two strokes and the Heritage Classic by five strokes.

Instead of competing in the Greensboro open last week, he rested briefly at home in Birmingham with his wife, Judy, and 7-month-old son, conferred with the accountant and came here a week ago to prepare for the Masters, a tournament he has never won. He finished nine strokes behind Jack Nicklaus last year, five behind Gary Player in 1974, nine behind Tommy Aaron in 1973 and 10 Player in 1972. But as the hottest golfer on the tour, he was the envy of his peers. On the practice tee, other golfers had joked with him goodnaturedly about his streak.

The Name on the Scoreboard
"The automatic machine," Jim Colbert had said. "Wind him up and let him go."

"What are you practicing for?" Gary Player had asked. "You don't need the practice."

Hubert Green had smiled and replied, "I hope I got four more," meaning one for each round in the Masters tournament. When he spun a pitching wedge to within one foot of the cup on the 400-yard first hole today for a tap-in birdie 3, The Green Machine was off and humming in pursuit of the green coat awarded to a Masters winner. On the 360-yard third hole, he sank a 25-foot putt for another birdie 3 and on the scoreboard near the putt for another birdie 3 and on the scoreboard near the fourth green a red 2 was next to his name, meaning he was two under par for the tournament. But on that score-board his name was spelled "Greene," the way Bert Greene, once a touring pro and now a Mississippi state

Braves Top Knicks, Gain On 76ers

By SAM GOLDAPER

The Knicks, who are playing out the string, and the Buffalo Braves, who are in the National Basketball Association playoffs for the third straight season, met last night at Madison Square Garden.

The Braves won, 105-98.

Since they were officially eliminated from their first playoff berth since the 1965-66 season, the Knicks had beaten the Chicago Bulls, Kansas City and the Braves.

While the game was unimportant to the Knicks, it was a key test for the Philadelphia 76ers for second-place honors in the Atlantic Division.

Philadelphia and Buffalo will meet in a two-of-three-game series, probably starting next Tuesday night. The team that finishes second would have the home-court advantage.

Bob McAdoo, the league's top scorer, took a 31.2-point average into the game and had 128 points in his previous three games. McAdoo had scored 40 or more points in 15 games this season, but the Braves lost eight of them.

After a sloppily played first half, the Braves led, 44-36, despite 15 turnovers. The Knicks made 13.

The Knicks piled up a 25-15 first-quarter advantage with the help of nine Buffalo turnovers that led to 10 points. The Braves made only five baskets in 16 attempts, scoring two field goals in nine minutes, including only

Schultz Gets Top Cornell Post

Cornell University yesterday appointed Richard D. Schultz of the University of Iowa as athletic director.

Cornell's president, Dale R. Corson, said, "Dick Schultz has the necessary qualifications to be Cornell's athletic director."

In addition to coaching the Hawkeyes' basketball and baseball teams, Schultz served as assistant vice president for student affairs.

Schultz said, "I have a lot to learn, especially about crew and lacrosse, but I'm looking forward to it."

The San Diego Padres accused Andy Messersmith, the free-agent pitcher, of "the most amazing display of arrogance" for turning down the club's four-year, $1,150,000 contract.

[Then his two-bit promoter [Herb Osmond, the agent] said it's $1,200,000 or nothing. That did it. We said it's nothing. I wouldn't take the guy now at any price. He can work in a car wash.]

Seeking to add muscle to their football team, the Toronto Argonauts have signed Lou Ferrigno, Mr. Universe of 1974-75, to a Canadian Football League contract.

Ferrigno never played high school or college football, so he cannot be designated as an American import under the C.F.L.'s quota on American players.

The New York State Athletic Commission and the Portland (Ore.) Boxing Commission seem to be at odds over the physical condition of Ray Lampkin, the lightweight fighter.

The Portland commission said Lampkin would be allowed to continue boxing unless medical evidence is presented to show he is unfit to box.

The concern over Lampkin's condition stems largely from his defeat by Roberto Duran on March 2, 1975.

Owens added, "The United States should have one of the finest teams. The boys who make it in this country are truly the cream of the world."

With his jaw wired shut and his head shaven, Steve Heidreich left Bloomington (Ind.) Hospital for his home in Watertown, S. D. Heidreich is the Indiana University miler who was struck by a car three weeks ago, then underwent brain surgery.

Diving for the Queen Conch

By NELSON BRYANT

BRAND CAYMAN ISLAND, West Indies—A stiff north wind moaned along the shore of Grand Cayn Island, but the shallow water before me was fairly m and clear, being proted by a barrier reef only few hundred yards off-shore.

The spot—which shall not be named specifically because some wild places, ether a remote trout stream or a productive mashing area, deserve some protection, to be discovered by those who are willing to search—was ideal for diving for conch, the water no more than 10 feet deep at any point.

The conch were about 200 yards apart, scattered along the shore, each with a hold in its upper part so it could be inserted to the edible creature's armor.

Three hours of snorkel-aid failed to find one and although there were other rewards in the signing of at least 20 different species of coral and a magnificent water forest of stag and coral, I was growing what frustrated.

One Brent Greene, a young Caymanian lad of 10th lives in the village of North Side, Brent's appearance wasn't entirely accurate, for my friend and I came on Grand Cayman, Ebanks of George Town, passed the word around I might need help in my search.

"Where?" I asked Brent, as one find conch? On soft sand bottom, in the grass, or where?" Brent picked up a stone and laid it alongside a huge conch. "You will usually find them," he said, "close coral, mostly brain coral, close as I've placed that one to the rock."

His soft speech would have ignited a student of English.

CONGRESS IS URGED TO EASE AIR CURBS

B. Says Its Regulation Industry Has Probably Forced Up Travel Fares

NEW COMPETITION ASKED

Agency Expects Some Upsets Service if Proposals for Change Are Accepted

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—The Civil Aeronautics Board today said its regulation of the nation's airlines probably forced air fares up unnecessarily and it urged Congress to ease its control over air travel.

The board said the Ford Administration was correct in arguing that airlines be given freedom to raise and lower fares and to start and stop service on routes of their choosing. The C.A.B. added, however, that it had some problems with the way the Administration proposed to accomplish its goals.

The unusual testimony, in a Federal agency record, indicated that the control of an industry be curtailed, came as Senate Commerce Subcommittee on Aviation continued hearings on the Ford proposal to introduce new competition in the nation's scheduled air industry.

Upsets Held Likely testimony by Chairman E. Robson, the C.A.B. acknowledged that moving from a regulated air system to one that is governed by competitive forces could cause disruptions in air service and in some airlines to fail financially.

It added "We believe the transition will be a difficult one and we believe that the industry will be subjected to a period of adjustment. It is our hope that the industry will be able to adjust to the new environment."

Robson said that the C.A.B. had conducted studies that showed that competition could cause disruptions in the nation's transportation system but that these disruptions probably would be short-term.

Secretary William T. Coleman said yesterday that Federal regulations that once protected airlines now are straining an industry, they said the situation could get worse unless the curbs are eased.

Lockheed to Disclose Bribe Recipients

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—The Lockheed Aircraft Corporation told Senate investigators today that it would comply with a subpoena demanding the names of officials in Japan and other countries who were paid millions of dollars in bribes by the company's sales agents.

Lockheed's lawyers, announcing the decision, asked for and were granted a five-day extension to get the data in order.

The subpoena requests specific answers to a number of questions asked two months ago by Senator Charles H. Percy, Republican of Illinois, who was interrogating Carl Kottchian, then Lockheed's chief executive officer. The names of the Japanese officials said to have received $12.5 million in payments from Lockheed over a period of 20 years are among the facts sought.

L.M.F. DISCLOSES CHARTER CHANGES

Broad Amendments Package Ends Old System of Fixed Money Exchange Rates

By EDWIN L. DALE JR., Special to The New York Times WASHINGTON, April 8—The International Monetary Fund made public today a sweeping package of amendments to its basic charter—the first complete overhaul since the founding of the fund at Bretton Woods, N. H. in 1944.

Secretary of the Treasury William E. Simon is expected to sign the amendments early next week. Once the required number of signatures is received—probably before the end of this month—the amendments can be submitted to Congress and other national parliaments for approval.

The main changes in the fund's articles of agreement are already known, including a new "freedom of choice" currency exchange rate system that permits nations to have floating rates as well as fixed par values in various forms.

The role of gold in the monetary system is diminished, including a prohibition against making gold again the "common denominator" for currency values as it was in the Bretton Woods system.

The L.M.F. has already decided to dispose of one-third of its gold, part by distribution to its members and part by sale on the open market, a process that will probably take four years. After that, the amendments open the way for disposal of the rest of the fund's gold, but only by a "weighted vote" majority of 85 percent.

Shots Called by Gould On Big Market Turns

By ROBERT J. COLE

When the stock market fell sharply on Wednesday, word spread rapidly that Edson Beers Gould might have had something to do with it.

Yesterday the market fell sharply again, and the rumors turned out to be something more substantial. Mr. Gould, editor of "Findings & Forecasts," a publication of Anametrics Inc., predicted yesterday that the Dow industrial index would drop 100 points.

Mr. Gould did not say how long it would take for the market to drop so sharply but for the last 15 years his institutional clients have looked to him for such guidance. And in the last five years—particularly after a string of successful forecasts—individual clients have turned to him as well.

Not long after World War I, Mr. Gould took stock of himself. He was 21 years old, an electrical engineer with a degree from Lehigh University and hard at work, at $50 a week, with the Western Electric Company, teaching other engineers circuitry in automatic telephone equipment.

Thoughts Turned Inward "What am I doing in this business?" he asked himself. "Engineers are a dime a dozen."

Mr. Gould's father, an officer with the Prudential Insurance Company, sent him to a friend, who, in turn, sent him to see a friend, with this advice, "Go to Wall Street. You might make a lot of money."

The man he went to see was John Moody, president of the Moody's investor service, who hired him, Mr. Gould eventually became editor of Moody's stock survey, editor of Moody's bond survey and in the 20's and 30's

Analyst Sees Risks Rising for Reaction of 100 Points or More in Average

By VARTANIG G. VARTAN Stock prices dropped again yesterday, partly in response to predictions by a leading analyst that the market faces the possibility of a substantial setback during coming weeks.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 9.13 points to 977.09 after plunging more than 15 points on Wednesday. Brokers said that a contributing factor to the decline on both days was the latest market analysis by Edson Gould, whose reports are published by Anametrics Inc., an investment advisory service.

Nervous anticipation of the report, which was released yesterday, helped to unsettle stock prices on Wednesday. Mr. Gould, regarded as the "dean" of technical analysts, enjoys a wide Wall Street following because of his successes in calling important market turns. He advised clients to sell on Jan. 11, 1973, a month when the Dow closed at its record of 1,051.70, and also recommended the purchase of stocks in late 1974, just before the market turned up sharply.

Yesterday, clients were advised by Mr. Gould that risks have increased for a reaction of 100 or more points in the relatively near future. He suggested a reduction of 25 to 30 percent in equity holdings.

Prospect of U.S. Trade Deficit Called a Healthy Sign

By BRENDAN JONES The prospect of a trade deficit this year after a record $11.1 billion trade surplus in 1975 is regarded by trade analysts of banks as a healthy sign for the world and, paradoxically, for the United States.

William Gibson, vice president and a monetary-trade economist with the Chase Manhattan, said he had expected the trade surplus to decline, but gradually and near the end of the year, not at the beginning. He also commented that two months did not make a trend and added that shifting currency values and widely varied economic conditions

Pension and Fund Managers Polled

By ROBERT METZ

Managers of pension and profit-sharing funds have been impressed by the potential in real estate, call options and oil and gas royalties despite the fact that recent market experience has dramatized the risks in these areas.

In the past it was possible to categorize the investments of such funds as stocks, bonds and cash equivalents. But a poll of 70 members of the advisory panel of Pensions & Investments — all managers of pension and profit-sharing assets — suggests that there is greater flexibility than in the past.

The 70 members of the panel who responded manage a total of $50 billion and, as the Cram Communications Inc. publication will print out in an article appearing next Monday, "even modest shifts in investment policy could involve the movement of several billions of dollars."

The poll found, for example, that 30 of the managers already have investments in real estate and that 44 are interested — still interested in some cases in which real estate has been added to portfolio — in buying real estate in the future.

Several present holders of real estate among those polled obviously are not too happy with the state of their investment. They indicated with emphasis, Pensions & Investments said, that they had no interest in future real estate investments.

"But on the whole, it is obvious that real estate investments will loom large in future plans," the publication added. Six of the fund managers reported that they were using call options and 37 indicated interest in this investment vehicle. Estimates of possible use in the future ranged up to 20 percent of assets, though the highest reported present use was 5 to 10 percent.

One manager handling well over $1 billion in pension investments questioned the legality of investing in stock options. While his fund had the capability of handling them, he said, "Our counsel tells us that their use in pension plans [with the earnings being nonrelated business income] will throw the tax-exempt status of the entire retirement plan into doubt."

The manager added a note that has been mentioned elsewhere when he said he would anticipate that if options were to become appropriate vehicles for pension plans, premiums would narrow considerably, lessening the attractiveness of writing options.

Leases on computers, tankers, etc., are at present in the portfolios of four funds, and nine are interested in their possible use in the future.

Few of the 70 respondents to the poll see the new investment media as likely to lead to serious changes in present reliance upon conventional equity and fixed-income investments. One summed up for all when he said:

"Alternatives will probably become more important but will not make up a significant portion of pension assets in the near future."

One major incentive to reconsider investment strategy is the Pension Reform Act of 1974, which has caused considerable nervousness since it seems to impose higher standards of investment. Whether this will lead to heavy reliance on guaranteed rate-of-return contracts, mutual funds and other investments mentioned in the poll is unclear.

Brokerage firms have been using money market funds to park customers' uncommitted funds, according to Oscar Tang, chairman of the $36 million Daily Income Fund of 230 Park Avenue.

Mr. Tang said that about 40 percent of his fund's assets had come from brokers who pass the interest earned along to their customers. Money market funds are investments in certificates of deposit, commercial paper and Treasury securities among other things.

Mr. Tang, whose fund has focused on this business, said in an interview that registered representatives liked the idea because it allowed them to maintain control over the customer's funds that have been temporarily withdrawn from the market. Often, when a customer sells shares, he will ask that the proceeds be sent to him, and the broker may never see them again, Mr. Tang indicated.

From the customer's point of view, Mr. Tang found this advantage: The customer doesn't have to think about what to do with the proceeds from a stock sale. At the same time, there is less incentive for the broker to persuade him to quickly buy a stock that the customer, on reflection, might regret.

Brokers who are using Daily Income Fund for this purpose appear to be offering the alternative to customers on a selective basis. Mr. Tang said that his fund did business with a dozen brokers but that the highest number of accounts with any given broker was about 200.

With the rise in the corporate bond market, the C. I. T. Financial Corporation, which postponed its financing plans in March, decided yesterday to reschedule an offering of debentures later this month.

The financing to be undertaken by a syndicate headed by Dillon, Read & Company will consist of $100 million of debentures due April 1, 2001, and $75 million due April 1, 1986.

Several other corporate fixed-income issues were reported yesterday. Columbia Gas System Inc. filed $75 million of 20-year debentures, the Pennsylvania Electric Company got authorization to sell $60 million of bonds, and the Boston Edison Company registered 2.5 million shares of preference stock.

What the new ruling will do is that any payment made to a foreign government under what is known as a "share of production" contract "is in substance a royalty in its entirety." Thus the payment can be deducted as an expense of doing business on United States tax returns but cannot be used as a twice-as-valuable credit against American tax owed.

While still at Lehigh University, he said, he was able to earn $150 a week playing the banjo at fraternity parties. Today he lives quietly in a fashionable East Side coop with his wife of 25 years.

The Goulds, who have two sons and a daughter, also own a farm in Pennsylvania.

Opportunity Missed
He likes to tell the story of the opportunity missed by his grandfather, Daniel Edson Gould.

He turned bullish again on Dec. 18, 1974, with the Dow at 903.49, urging investors to start buying stock again.

A company brochure says he is "one of Wall Street's pioneer technical analysts." He is said to have put together the first glamour stock average in 1960.

Recalling his early days, he said he was told that Wall Street was "virgin territory," and that he should "forget everything you've been told and find out for yourself."

Mr. Gould has done just that ever since.

Strength Here Is Ascribed to Recent Gains in London

Cocoa futures continued their recent climb yesterday, with the May delivery closing at 73.75, up from 72.80 cents a pound Wednesday on the New York Cocoa Exchange. A week ago, on April 1, the same contract traded at 70.40.

Traders ascribe the recent strength in cocoa prices partly to higher London prices, where a price war has been started to put their pounds sterling, which have been losing value, to work in commodities with good demand prospects.

Prices here followed the upward move in London. Also, traders expected the Association of Chocolate Manufacturers to issue yesterday its first-quarter estimates of cocoa grindings. Because of the improvements in the economy traders expected a healthy increase in the figures but the association said issuance of the estimates would be delayed until today.

An American manufacturer bought 6,000 tons of cocoa, which was also considered bullish. At this time of year most manufacturers of chocolate have enough inventory for the summer and they would tend to be buyers only if they expected prices might be moving higher.

Copper and Silver Rise
Copper and silver prices in London also rose sharply under the impact of buying by holders of sterling. As a result, both metals rose sharply on the Commodity Exchange.

Copper for May delivery closed at 68.20 cents a pound, up from 66.10, while silver for May delivery added more than 9 cents a pound to close at $4.29 1/10 an ounce, up from $4.20 1/10.

Grain and soybean futures rose on the Chicago Board of Trade but apparently not because of a statement by a Department of Agriculture official that the Soviet Union would buy more United States grain in the next few months. The official, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Richard E. Bell, also stressed that Government figures about the leveling of food prices proved that prevailing grain sales to the Russians had not hurt consumers.

Traders believed that wheat prices rose a little yesterday as speculative buying ahead of a Government report due today on drought damage to stock prices. But Mr. Gould, who once told an interviewer that much of his own money was made in real estate, also noted that he expects "materially higher stock prices over a period of time."

Mr. Gould is not the first technical analyst—men who try to read the market's future by studying price and volume patterns—to suggest a cautious approach over the near term.

For some time, G. Stanley Berge, who heads the portfolio strategy group at Providence office of Tucker, Athony & R. L. Day, a brokerage firm, has suggested a market correction "of at least 6 to 10 percent."

Mr. Berge has a wide following among institutional investors and like Mr. Gould, he is optimistic about market prospects after a reaction phase that helps to consolidate a substantial advance that began four months ago. This advance peaked at a 38-month closing high of 1,009 for the Dow on March 24.

OPEC to Weigh New Price Increase
VIENNA, April 8 (UPI)—Oil ministers of the 13-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will meet here today to discuss another oil price increase after July 1, an OPEC spokesman said today. The May 27 meeting was originally scheduled for Jakarta, Indonesia, but it was transferred to Bali because of "better facilities" there, the spokesman said.

The ministers will also discuss the possibility of moving OPEC's headquarters from Vienna following last December's Arab terrorist attack in which key oil ministers were seized as hostages.

Week's Auto Output to Rise 26.6%

DETROIT, April 8 (UPI)—Domestic auto plants will build 193,214 cars this week, the best production rates in more than 17 months, according to the trade paper Automotive News. Production will be up 26.6 percent from last week's 152,594 units and will be 45.9 percent ahead of the 131,509 cars built in the corresponding week a year ago. It will be the highest output since the industry built 195,402 cars in the week ended Nov. 2, 1974.

All domestic car plants are operating this week and 13 of them will be on Saturday overtime at the General Motors Corporation and the Ford Motor Company. The only plants where production was cut was a Ford truck plant in Kansas City, Mo., down for inventory adjustment, and a G.M. truck plant in Pontiac, Mich., where production was curtailed because of the teamsters' strike.

Car production this year totals 2,425,338 cars, up 59.1 percent from 1,524,408 units a year ago. The American Motors Corporation and the Chrysler Corporation said all their assembly plants would be operating next week.

Utility and Exxon on $1.9 Billion Deal

MIAMI, April 8 (UPI)—The Florida Power and Light Company announced today that it had signed a six-year, $1.9 billion contract with the Exxon Company that would supply the utility with about 74 percent of its fuel needs. The utility said the new contract with Exxon would take effect Jan. 1, 1978. The Belcher Oil Company of Miami currently supplies the giant utility most of its fuel oil, although Exxon provides about 15 percent.

Strength Here Is Ascribed to Recent Gains in London

Cocoa futures continued their recent climb yesterday, with the May delivery closing at 73.75, up from 72.80 cents a pound Wednesday on the New York Cocoa Exchange. A week ago, on April 1, the same contract traded at 70.40.

Traders ascribe the recent strength in cocoa prices partly to higher London prices, where a price war has been started to put their pounds sterling, which have been losing value, to work in commodities with good demand prospects.

Prices here followed the upward move in London. Also, traders expected the Association of Chocolate Manufacturers to issue yesterday its first-quarter estimates of cocoa grindings. Because of the improvements in the economy traders expected a healthy increase in the figures but the association said issuance of the estimates would be delayed until today.

About Real Estate

Stakes Big in Tax-Shelter Issue

By ALAN S. OSER

Among certain forces in Congress there is an attack on the use of tax shelters to produce housing. A bill to this effect has already passed the House of Representatives — H.R. 10512, sponsored by the Ways and Means Committee—and the subject is under consideration in the Senate Finance Committee.

Not surprisingly, there is consternation in the housing industry nationally, and especially among the producers of multifamily developments. This ailing segment of the housing industry has historically depended on the tax advantages available to wealthy investors to raise capital needed for the "equity" share of the total financing.

But the proposed new law has a special meaning for New York City. As it stands now, it would drive another nail in the coffin of subsidized housing for lower and moderate income people, which has flourished in the city as nowhere else in the nation.

realized, or even eliminate benefits already realized. In any event, the ability of such major general contractors as the deMatteis Organization to produce middle-income housing was created by using the tax device to make it possible to raise equity capital. In the rehabilitation field, the Continental Wingate Company came forward to produce probably the largest subsidized rehabilitation project in the country in Mott Haven in the Bronx, the Jose de Diego-Beekman Houses, with 1,320 apartments.

It is estimated that 70 percent of all the subsidized housing produced in the city, whether new or rehabilitated, has been done by profit-motivated producers.

The rest is the work of nonprofit producers, among them the housing production arms of the Urban Coalition, the Roman Catholic Archdiocese, United Neighborhood Houses, the Council of Churches and others such as Phipps Houses, the United Housing Foundation, the South Bronx Community Housing Corporation, the Metro North community group in East Harlem and the Upper Park Avenue Community Association.

Under the law, the nonprofit groups have had the benefit of 100 percent rather than 90 percent mortgage financing. But the recent trend is for the nonprofit organizations to set up limited-profit housing companies for each development project so that start-up money can be raised from private investment sources.

The reason is that the charitable contributions on which these organizations depend are drying up, and the housing groups need funds beyond the full mortgage amount to pay their overhead.

For the city, the particular irony is that the tax laws are no longer working even to help rehabilitation.

"Wherever you go these days people are saying 'Rehabilitation is the answer, restoration is the answer,'" said A. Carleton Dukes, executive vice president of Continental Wingate. "But the biggest single inducement to subsidized rehabilitation died on Dec. 31, even though everyone was for it." He was speaking about Section 167k of the Internal Revenue Code, which permitted accelerated depreciation treatment for investments in subsidized rehabilitation.

"It's a dramatic case of government ineptitude," he said.

He also noted that if money cannot be raised by "syndicating" the equity, housing production will become possible only for giant companies, driving smaller organizations from the housing business.

Such housing experts as Albert A. Walsh, formerly the city's Housing and Development Administrator and now head of the National Realty Committee, an organization of real-estate investors, are convinced that even if the state's lending capacity for housing is restored, there will be little new subsidized production unless Congress allows tax incentives for the equity investor, or some equivalent means of raising equity capital. The squeeze is affecting the nonprofit producers as well, and the hurt is felt in New York City more than anywhere in the nation.

VENEZUELA BEGINS TALKS WITH OWENS

CARACAS, Venezuela, April 8 (AP)—Owens-Illinois Inc. began formal talks here today with the Venezuelan Government about the announced takeover of the company's holdings in a dispute over a kidnapped American executive, officials said.

Owens was represented by William Coleman, general manager of its Western Hemisphere division, and local company officials, a Government spokesman said. Venezuela said it would buy out the local holdings of Owens-Illinois because the company had published a manifesto as demanded by the leftist kidnappers of its manager in Venezuela, William F. Niehaus of Toledo, Ohio. Mr. Niehaus was abducted Feb. 27 by seven gunmen believed to be members of a small guerrilla group who accused him of interfering in Venezuelan economics and politics.

"Negotiations aimed at reaching a fair compensation in the takeover of the company's local stocks have begun in a cordial atmosphere," the spokesman said.

22 ARE REBUKED ON HUNTING TRIPS

Invitations by Rockwell and Northrop Cited by Reed

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—Secretary of the Air Force Thomas Reed sent letters of admonition, a mild form of rebuke, to 22 military and civilian officials today for accepting hunting-lodge invitations from the Rockwell International Corporation and the Northrop Corporation, major defense contractors.

The Pentagon said 76 other cases involving both military men and civilian officials were still under investigation. The list of 22 receiving the latest letters of admonition included 17 Air Force officers, four of them generals, and five civilians.

The Pentagon said 76 other cases involving both military men and civilian officials were still under investigation. The list of 22 receiving the latest letters of admonition included 17 Air Force officers, four of them generals, and five civilians.

Special Assistant One of those on the list is Maj. Gen. Harry M. Darmsthandler, who was special assistant to the Air Force chief of staff handling the B-1 advanced bomber project. The B-1 is being developed by Rockwell. General Darmsthandler has since retired.

Also on the list of those who accepted invitations to go hunting at a Rockwell-leased lodge in Maryland's Chesapeake Bay were Ben S. Martin, football coach at the Air Force Academy, and Col. Frank Merritt, who was Air Force Academy athletic director at the time Colonel Merritt is retired now.

The Pentagon said the letters of admonition were issued "for attending defense contractor-sponsored hunting facilities during the period 1971-1974."

"Lack of Judgment" In the letters, Mr. Reed said to each of the 22 that "while I understand that there is no evidence of any improper influence as a result of your attendance, nevertheless, I must conclude that the lack of judgment in accepting the invitation reflects adversely on the Air Force."

Mr. Reed also told them: "I know you will avoid placing yourself and the Air Force in such a position again."

In January, the Pentagon admonished 38 Air Force, Navy, and Marine Corps officers and civilians for accepting invitations to the Northrop Corporation's hunting lodge sometime between October, 1971, and January, 1974.

On March 16, Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld handed a "severe reprimand" to Dr. Malcolm R. Currie, the Pentagon's research chief, for spending last Labor Day weekend at a place owned by Rockwell in the Bahamas, and gave a letter of admonition to Secretary of the Navy J. William "Burrhead" Brown for accepting an invitation to the Rockwell-leased hunting lodge on Chesapeake Bay.

Utility Customers Must Bear Ad Costs

By REGINALD STUART

In an action likely to have national implications, the New York State Public Service Commission announced yesterday that customers of an upstate electric and gas utility must bear the company's advertising expenses...

It was "unenforceable" that some of the advertisements of the utility contained arguments in favor of nuclear generation.

"And since the merits of nuclear power are a hotly contested public issue, these advertisements might perhaps be characterized as political in character and therefore long-standing commission policy excludeable from rates," the commission said.

POUND HITS A LOW ON WAGE DISCORD

Traders Doubt Britain Can Avert Fight With Unions

BRUSSELS, April 8 (UPI)—The pound declined to a new low on European money markets today, induced by doubts among traders about the British Government's ability to avert an economy-crippling struggle with labor.

Illinois Case Cited

In February, the Illinois Commerce Commission refused to allow the Illinois Bell Company, a subsidiary of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, to recover $918,000 spent last year on advertising. The commission said it could not allow "image building" expenses to be recovered.

Challenge by Coalition

It is part of a much larger debate that has been emerging in recent years challenging a long-standing policy of regulators that allows electric, natural gas and telephone companies to count advertising costs as a "necessary" business expense and therefore recoverable through rate adjustments.

Opposition Vote

The opposition vote was cast by Commissioner Edward Berlin, who said in his dissenting statement that he did "not agree that it is proper to use ratepayer dollars to further one side of a public policy debate and advertising campaigns designed to promote nuclear generation must be so regarded."

Peoples Coalition of the Genesee Valley

In the New York case, the Peoples Coalition of the Genesee Valley, a customer group for the latest statistical quarter, challenged inclusion of the nuclear power advertising expenses in a rate case.

Assembly Delays Bill for Savings-Bank Checking

By RONALD SMOTHERS

ALBANY, April 8—The Assembly today amended the floor bill granting savings banks checking-account privileges and as a result slowed the progress of the bill significantly.

A vote of 92 to 34, a coalition of Democrats and Republicans forced an addition to the bill that would prohibit the savings banks from imposing a service charge for the checking accounts, which are now offered free of charge.

SERIOUS DRINKING IN ARMY REPORTED

Alcohol More of a Problem than Narcotics, Study Says

WASHINGTON, April 8 (AP)—Twenty percent of all Army officers and 32 percent of enlisted men are either heavy drinkers or "binge" drinkers, a study reported today.

In an 89-page report that drew heavy drinking as a far more serious and widespread problem in the armed forces than narcotics, the General Accounting office said that Army duty time lost to drinking in 1973 totaled 2,200 staff years at a cost of $17 million in pay and allowances alone.

$52 Million Navy Loss It said that the Navy offered a "conservative" estimate of a $52 million loss from absenteeism, decreased efficiency and poor decision making because of drinking.

More than half of the non-serious (Army) officers and more than half of all junior enlisted men believed it was all right to get drunk once in a while as long as it did not become a habit, the report said.

stage of assets in New York State. "This is all a charade designed to kill the bill," charged Assemblyman George Cincotta, Democrat of Brooklyn, who predicted that the effort by some to modify the bill would create a "backlash" among their constituents who favor the checking accounts as a consumer measure.

Mr. Koppell disagreed and said that letters he received indicated that his constituents favored a number of the amendments. Others attempting to expand the bill, such as Assemblyman Arthur O. Eve of Buffalo, said they hoped that the prospect of delays would convince the savings banks to negotiate a solution to the dispute.

While a spokesman for the New York Savings Banks Association conceded that the prohibition of service charges was the "most palatable" of the amendments, she said the banks were nonetheless adamantly opposed to any further modifications of the bill.

herself in group photographs of her friends—she was a very determined woman. In a striking self-portrait of 1888, she stands dignified, and erect and a little stern, facing the camera—and us—with a penetrating stare.

The dramatic change in circumstances came in 1929, when Alice Austen lost her fortune in the stock-market crash. By that time, members of her immediate family were all dead, and she occupied Clear Comfort with a friend, Gertrude Tate, with whom she struggled to make some kind of living, selling some of the contents of the house in antiques dealers and even opening a restaurant, which failed.

She was meanwhile afflicted with crippling arthritis, and she was forcibly removed from Clear Comfort in 1945 after she could no longer meet mortgage payments.

Poorhouse Resident Her photographs were rescued from this debacle by Loring McMillen, director of the Staten Island Historical Society, which has had custody of them ever since. They were rediscovered in 1951 by Oliver Jensen, an editor at American Heritage magazine, in the course of his research for a book called "The Revolt of American Women," published in 1952. Alice Austen, crippled and confined to a wheelchair, was then living in the municipal poorhouse on Staten Island. She was 85.

As a result of Mr. Jensen's discovery, Life magazine published eight pages of her photographs in September 1951, and others appeared in Holiday and American Heritage. The money was used to place Alice Austen in a private nursing home, where she died, just as her new fame was beginning, the following June.

Given both the current interest in photography and the achievements of women, this fame is certain to prosper.

NUCLEAR POWER

Forty-seven Assemblymen introduced a bill setting five requirements that would have to be met before a nuclear power plant could be approved for operation in the state, including a testing of the emergency cooling system, a plan for the disposal of radioactive waste, and evacuation procedures in case of accident.

There were these other developments in Albany today: STEIN HEARING Assemblyman Andrew Stein, Democrat of Manhattan, and the union representing most state employees announced a joint public hearing on waste in state and local government, to be held Monday morning at the World Trade Center in New York City.

HOUSING AIDE QUITS

Governor Carey accepted the resignation of Lester Eisner Jr., first deputy commissioner of housing and community renewal, who had refused to complete the financial disclosure form required of state employees earning more than $30,000 a year.

Mr. Eisner, whose resignation he had requested, for his "tireless assistance" and asked him to remain for two more months to provide a smooth transition.

A LAWYER ADMITS 2.5 MILLION THEFT

Forgery Guilty Plea Made in Bilking of 2 Firms

By TOM GOLDSTEIN

A lawyer who had been charged with stealing more than $2.5 million from two prominent Wall Street law firms where he was a partner pleaded guilty yesterday to forgery in the second degree.

In a brief proceeding in State Supreme Court in Manhattan, the lawyer, Joel Dolkart, admitted having forged a check for $250,000 that was transferred from one of the law firms—Simpson Thacher & Bartlett—to his personal account.

Mr. Dolkart's plea to the forgery count, the most serious charge in the voluminous indictment that was filed in December 1974, covered the remaining 59 counts in the indictment. Mr. Dolkart, who is 60 years old, faces automatic disbarment and a possible prison term of up to seven years.

Justice James J. Leif of State Supreme Court scheduled sentencing for June 10, when Mr. Dolkart must provide a full accounting of what he had done with the money.

Plea Follows Bargaining Wall Street lawyers said yesterday that they could not recall another instance of a partner in a large law firm being found guilty of criminal activity of this type.

The plea by Mr. Dolkart, who had also been general counsel of Gulf & Western Industries, Inc., a large conglomerate, came after several months of intense negotiation between his lawyer, Bernard Nussbaum, and Robert M. Morgenthau, the Manhattan District Attorney, and Peter Annunzio, chief of the frauds bureau in the district attorney's office.

Lawyers familiar with the case said that by entering a plea Mr. Dolkart avoided a trial that could have been embarrassing to two of the best known law firms in the country.

From 1967 to the summer of 1974, when he was dismissed, Mr. Dolkart was a partner in the Simpson Thacher firm. Before that he was a partner in Strasser, Spiegelberg, Fried and Frank, which is now named Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson.

While at both firms, Mr. Dolkart handled the legal business of Gulf & Western, whose chairman, Charles Bishdorp, was his long-time personal friend.

How It Worked According to the indictment, Mr. Dolkart used his position at Gulf & Western in his elaborate scheme to misappropriate funds from the law firms.

The original indictment charged Mr. Dolkart with forgery, falsification of business records, forgery of criminal possession of forged instruments and state income-tax evasion.

According to the indictment, Mr. Dolkart set up checking accounts at Marine Midland Bank in New York for two Gulf & Western units, and used himself as the authorized check signer for these subunits.

Then, according to the indictment, Mr. Dolkart would frequently request that the firm issue a check charged to the Gulf & Western account as an "exchange check" payable to the account of one of the conglomerate's subsidiaries.

Mr. Dolkart would later cash the check out, according to the indictment.

Michelin to Build Plant in CAIRO, April 8 (AP)—Egypt and the French tire company Michelin, have signed a $50 million agreement to establish a factory in Cairo, Egypt.

Turned to Michelin after negotiations with the American Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company broke down over availability of convertible currency for raw material to manufacture tires.

Court Seeks Names in Cable-TV Case

By DAVID BURNEAM
Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, April 8—The Federal Communications Commission has been ordered by a Federal court to prepare a list of all persons who made off-the-record presentations about cable television while the commission was drafting rules that sharply restrict the cable industry.

Should the court rule on the propriety and legality of private contacts in situations where an agency is considering the adoption of a general rule, the decision could have a major impact on the way Washington lawyers, working for thousands of American companies, seek to influence the commissions that regulate them.

The order to provide the list was issued by the United States District Court of Columbia in response to a petition that contended that such long-accepted methods of lobbying were in fact a form of economic pressure that was improper.

According to the court order, the F.C.C. must provide by next week a list of all persons who made informal presentations about cable television during the three-year period from July 1972 to August 1975, when the commission was considering rules that restrict the films and sports events that cable operators may show their customers.

In a brief filed for CBS, Joel Rosenbloom argued that informal approaches in rule-making proceedings have long been accepted by the courts and were necessary for the commission to obtain the information it needs when acting as a quasi-legislative body.

The question of the propriety of the informal contacts was raised by Henry Geller, a former general counsel of the F.C.C., in his friend-of-the-court brief supporting a challenge to the cable television rules adopted by the commission.

The F.C.C., like most Federal regulatory commissions, has strict rules forbidding what lawyers call ex parte contacts when it is acting as a judge and deciding a specific matter such as which corporation should be granted a broadcast license. But the rules against ex parte, or one-sided, contacts do not apply in most Federal commissions when a broad regulation is being considered.

Mr. Geller argued that "the controlling principle is not the existence of some particular statutory requirement or label as to the nature of the proceeding but rather two criteria—conflicting private claims to a valuable privilege."

The lawyer also argued that while various public interest groups were able to submit arguments and take part in the formal hearing, "they did not participate in the final crucial decisional stage—only the industry lobbyists participated on several occasions at that stage."

To support that assertion, Mr. Geller quoted a speech he said had been given in 1974 by Everett H. Erlich, senior vice president and general counsel of ABC to a group of network affiliates.

Noting that his company had learned that the F.C.C. was considering considerable changes in the cable television rules, Mr. Erlich was quoted as describing ABC's response.

"We took the leadership in opposing these proposals with the result that key members of Congress made it known in no uncertain terms that they did not expect the commission to act on such a far-reaching proposal," Mr. Erlich was quoted as having said.

Mr. Geller also quoted from a speech he said had been given two years ago by the F.C.C. chairman, Richard E. Wiley, opposing informal contacts. "During the delay until a decision, oral argument often continues informally in the privacy of individual commissioner and staff offices," Mr. Wiley was quoted as having said.

"I simply do not think this is a good practice," Mr. Wiley was quoted as having said, adding that he therefore hoped the commission would make decisions as fast as possible before there was time for such contacts.

At a briefing this morning, Ron Nessen, the White House press secretary, criticized a headline in Thursday's edition of The New York Times that said, "Ford Rejects Enabling of Cable TV Curbs." But Mr. Nessen confirmed that the Ford Administration's regulatory reform group had decided that the Administration should not send legislation easing restrictions on cable television to Congress until further research had been completed.

A similar stand was taken

Westinghouse's McGannon Hits TV Industry Co

By LES BROWN

Donald H. McGannon received the distinguished service award of the National Association of Broadcasters in 1964, the industry's highest honor. But last week, he and the five television stations he oversees for the Westinghouse Broadcasting Company were expelled from the association for refusing to subscribe to the industry's television code.

Mr. McGannon's objection to the code—the set of professional standards under which most television stations operate—is not that it is too stringent, but that it is too weak.

"The Code is nothing," Mr. McGannon said in an interview the other day. "Tell me one thing the code has done—given us family viewing time? Family viewing is a charade. We all know that children watch television after 9 o'clock and are being exposed to excesses in crime and violence while the networks carry on their frenetic competition for audience."

Mr. McGannon also disparages the television code for permitting too many commercials, for allowing stations to accept advertising for feminine-hygiene products and for resisting the adoption of rules that would restrict over-the-counter drug advertising without first investigating whether promoting such products is in the best interests of society.

From Whom It Comes

Broadcasting critics and reformers have been known to speak this way, but seldom broadcasters themselves. But Mr. McGannon, who is chairman and president of the Westinghouse group—the most powerful broadcast organization outside the networks—has frequently been at odds with his own industry.

Recently, for example, when Nicholas Johnson, head of the National Citizens Committee for Broadcasting, a broadcast reform organization, began a campaign for regulations to require all television stations to devote at least one hour a week of prime time to public affairs programming, he received the support of 28 citizens groups and one broadcaster—Mr. McGannon.

The Westinghouse executive had also barred cigarette advertising from his stations months before it was barred from radio and television by law and it was on his petition that the Federal Communications Commission adopted the prime-time access rule in 1970, limiting television networks to three hours a night in the peak viewing hours.

His company's NBC-affiliated stations in Philadelphia and Boston had declined to carry the network movie "Dirty Harry" and the CBS-affiliated stations in Pittsburgh and San Francisco last week would not accept "Helter Skelter." The Baltimore station turned down the ABC movie "Buster and Billie" recently and last year would not carry the series, "Hot in Baltimore."

"Our own code is much tougher than that of the industry," Mr. McGannon remarked, adding that it would be hypocritical to embrace the N.A.B. code "when I couldn't defend it proudly."

Quarrel Dates Back

Acknowledging that the Westinghouse stations are sometimes accused of censorship when they reject certain network shows, Mr. McGannon said: "I prefer to think of those actions as a licensee meeting his obligation to serve the community needs. The broadcaster has to view these things with a critical eye in light of the medium's power to influence attitudes and to affect how people live."

Mr. McGannon's quarrel with the television code began in 1969, when he objected to the "overcommercialization" that occurred when the 30-second commercial supplanted the 60-second commercial. While the commercial time had increased, the number of commercial messages had been reduced to double.

He indicated that the change to 30-second commercials in parts of the schedule of other stations set in 1968 probably cost his company $5 million a year in forfeited advertising.

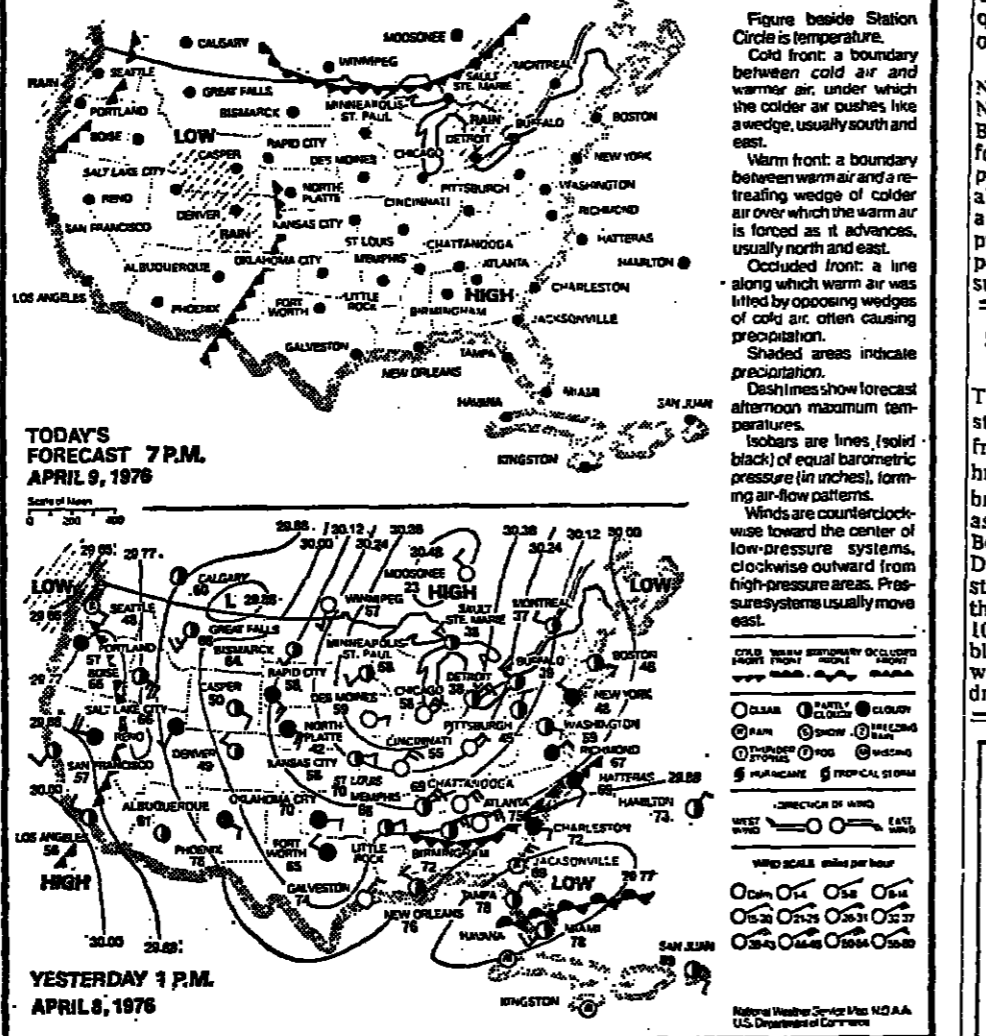

He attributed shortcoming of the television code to the fact that the networks had allowed to participate on the board that created the code in the networks, as programs, should not have a say in shaping the standards program content, but should be to a code forged by licensed stations.

Weather Reports and Forecast

Summary

It will remain cool in the Northeast today, skies will be variably cloudy across most of New England, and clear over Metropolitan New York. Temperatures will be cooler in the Southeast, and mild from the lake region and Mississippi Valley through the Plains States and Rockies to the northern and central intermountain region; cool weather will prevail elsewhere. Rain—with snow at higher elevations—will fall in western portions of Wyoming and Colorado, while showers—with snow in mountain areas—will occur in western Idaho and Washington. Sunny weather should cover the rest of the country.

Fair weather developed yesterday over Metropolitan New York, although earlier in the day clouds covered the Northeast and most of the rest of the Eastern Seaboard. Rain fell in northern Florida, while scattered areas of rain were reported in southeastern Pennsylvania and eastern North Carolina; skies were clear elsewhere, except in the eastern half of the country. It was quite cool in the Northeast, lake region, Ohio Valley and Middle Atlantic States. Fair skies extended from the upper Mississippi Valley into the northern Rockies, while clouds covered portions of the Central and Southern Plains States; rain and drizzle developed in central Nebraska and northeastern Kansas, while scattered showers were scattered in southwestern Oklahoma and north-central Texas. Under mostly cloudy skies, light rain developed along the Pacific Coast, while elsewhere, it was partly sunny.

Statue on Common Stolen

BOSTON, April 8 (AP)—Thieves using a cutting torch stole a 4-foot bronze statue from Boston Common today as hundreds of people strolled in bright sunshine. Alan Austin, assistant commissioner for the Boston Parks and Recreation Department, said he understood that the statue, which weighed about 100 pounds, was in a blanket, threw it in a station wagon parked nearby and drove away.

TV Review

"David and King Saul," Two-Hour Special

By JOHN J. O'CONNOR

The first half of "The Story of David," called "David and King Saul," can be seen on ABC-TV tonight at 9 o'clock. I watched the installment on a large screen at the studios of Columbia Pictures television division, and I now believe that was a mistake. A production designed for a small television screen, frequently in fact, nearly always does not work in giant blowup.

For television generally, performances tend to be low-key and kept to the forefront in magnified form. The same performances go somewhat dull, while background details, suddenly made quite visible, become silly and grotesque. So, on the large screen, the two hours of "David and King Saul" seem to be unwinding in slow motion, while the Israeli extras stand around the sidelines looking curious or even puzzled about what they are witnessing.

The producer of "The Story of David" is Mildred Freed Alberg, who is a serious and accomplished creator of biblical epics. Her scholarly consultant for the project was David Noel Freedman, editor of the Anchor Bible series and director of the program on religious studies at the University of Michigan.

Her writer is Ernest Kinoy, who also did the script for "Jacob and Joseph," another Alberg project. And her cinematographer is John Cronquist, who uses the landscapes of Israel and Spain to convincing effect.

"David and King Saul" follows the life of the young shepherd boy from innocent singings to banishment by the hysterically suspicious Saul, from the killing of Goliath to the verge of becoming King of Israel after the deaths of Saul and his son Jonathan.

David is played by Timothy Bottoms, who, in elaborate curly coiffure, bears an unfortunate resemblance to Petula Clark. He does not, however, sound like the pop singer. In fact, while singing his sweet songs, he does not even sound like himself, as the music tracks appear to have been dubbed.

Saul, on the other hand, is played by Anthony Quayle, who brings his usual quotient of artistic shading and physical substance to the role. His performance is outstanding, the road is at best uneven. Several of the other major speaking parts are filled by Israel actors, and the level of histrionics occasionally settles into the eyes-rolling-heavenward school dear to the hearts of Yiddish theater devotees.

Mr. Kinoy's script is quite good. Unlike "Jacob and Joseph," which fumbled badly in search of an "archaic" tone, "David and King Saul" takes a language approach that manages to be both pleasantly casual and subtly dignified. Unfortunately, the script is not helped by several instances of dreadful dubbing and poor synchronization.

The second half of "The Story of David" will be presented Sunday at 9 P.M. King David will be played by Keith Mitchell, Bathsheba by Jane Seymour. I have every intention of watching it home on a normal television set.

Women Of The Year

1976

Last night, in a 90-minute show on NBC-TV, these ten American women were celebrated for outstanding achievements in their fields. Barbara Walters served as host, and an outstanding list of presenters and entertainers added to the luster of the evening.

The event: the fourth annual Ladies' Home Journal Women of the Year Awards, sponsored for TV by Procter & Gamble. Created by the Journal, this national program honoring the achievements of women in many fields has now become a solid American tradition.

The Women of the Year Awards are based on Journal reader preferences, plus the decisions of a blue-ribbon jury. The awards make a glorious point: that more and more American women are forging ahead to leadership positions on many fronts, providing increasing role models for younger women.

The Journal believes that this new, evolving woman is crucial to America's future. In our pages and elsewhere, we do all we can to encourage her to use her many resources for the betterment of her nation, her community and her own personal life. She is a true achiever—whether at home or in larger spheres. Whatever her choice of the many options open to her, she'll do the job well.

The Journal congratulates the Women of the Year, and salutes all women—every year—who are reaching up and out to new accomplishments and fulfillments.

Never Underestimate the Power of a Woman.
